THE WAR BUDGET.

No Abatement In the Preparations For Battles.

EPIRUS REINVADED BY GREEKS.

During the Conflict at Pentepegadia, According to the Account of One Correspondent, the Turks Routed Their Opponents From Strong Positions at the First Fierce Onslaught.

London, May 3.—The Times correspondent at Patras, giving further details of the fighting at Pentepegadia, notes the neglect of the officers to provide for the timely arrival of reinforcements, a matter so difficult in that wild section of country, and proceeds: "When the Turks opened the attack I realize that their fierce onslaught might expel the mere handful of Greeks, but I did not realize that this one blow would throw the entire Greek army in Epirus into a hopeless panic and cause the loss of all the positions gained since the opening of the campaign."

"Six thousand Turks scaled the mountain, covered as it was with bushes and rocks, and in the face of firing which was rapid and continuous. They lost heavily, in spite of the fact that two Greek guns were inexplicably removed from action shortly after the fusillade began. The Evzones fought bravely but were compelled to retire."

"The rest of the Greek positions have been abandoned. There has been apparently no stand anywhere and the whole army is crumbling without firing a shot."

"We entered Kumuzades, which 3,000 men with six guns had deserted, accompanied by the terrified villagers, carrying their property, and then we descended the rough pass, where for hours we met no one. The retreating and panic-stricken troops were far ahead."

"About midnight we and our mournful procession of villagers overtook the routed army on the road, crowded and in utter confusion, packed with a mass of humanity tumbling on through the darkness, without hurry and silently, for it was a strange panic that had seized the men, a sullen, unexcited, stubborn determination not to fight, but to press on toward Arta in a sluggish, irresistible wave."

"At Kanopoulo Colonel Botzari and his staff vainly tried to check the rout and to make a stand, but the mass, continually growing, kept rolling along."

WITH VIGOR

Will the War Preparations Be Pushed at Constantinople.

Constantinople, May 3.—War preparations go on with unabated vigor. Two commissions, composed of officials of the ministries of public works and of war, have been formed for the purpose of inspecting railways and facilitating the dispatch of troops to the frontier.

It has been decided to extinguish the torches in all the lighthouses on the Gulf of Smyrna as far as Karaburun during the continuance of the war. It is officially announced that the Greeks resident in Turkey may become naturalized as an alternative to leaving the country. This will be compulsory for all Greeks officially employed in Turkey.

The porte has undertaken to provide guards for the protection of the American missions in Asia Minor and has promised that these shall not be removed without the consent of the American legation.

GREEK LETTER BOYS

Propose to Raise a Fund For Hellenic Patriots in America.

Cincinnati, May 3.—An address has been issued to the officers and members of Delta Kappa Epsilon suggesting that a movement be inaugurated among the college fraternities, commonly known as the Greek letter societies, in all of the colleges of the country, to raise a fund to assist the modern native Greeks in America in the desire so general among them to return home to engage in the war in behalf of their native land.

It is proposed that none of the money subscribed be used to purchase arms or ammunition for the Greeks, nor that there be any violation of the obligations of national neutrality. The money subscribed will be used solely to pay transportation expenses.

It is suggested to each fraternity to bring the matter to the attention of chapters, both alumnal and active.

Right Wing Victorious.

London, May 3.—Captain Rabbek of King George's personal staff wired here from Athens that the right wing of the Greek army had repulsed the Turks, but that the left wing had retreated behind the old frontier line to avoid being circumvented. Captain Rabbek adds: "The Greek army in Epirus, after defeat at Pentepegadia, has retired to Arta. All hope of continuing the war is now virtually abandoned. The fleet has returned to Volo for the protection of the inhabitants."

Reports Are Conflicting.

London, May 3.—The difficulty in reconciling the utterly conflicting accounts of the fighting is in no wise diminished. It is almost safe to say that General Smolenski's victory at Velesino was much less important than it has been represented to be, and unless the Greeks are able to make a stand at Pharsalos another disgraceful retreat is inevitable. Despite previous telegrams it appears extremely doubtful that the Turks have occupied Volo.

In Battle Array.

Athens, May 3.—The whole body of Greek troops near Pharsalos and Domokos has been drawn up in order of battle, but there has been no fighting. The inhabitants of Pharsalos have abandoned the town in fear of a Turkish attack, and an exodus has begun from Domokos in the direction of Lamia, the refugees pitching their tents in the open country.

Conference at Paris.

London, May 3.—It is semi-officially stated that Lord Salisbury's proposal to the powers for a conference at Paris to discuss measures with a view of ending the war between Turkey and Greece has already been under consideration for several days at the various foreign offices, and may now be considered definitely abandoned.

Reinvaded Epirus.

Arta, May 3.—After remaining inactive for two days the Greek troops reinvaded Epirus. The Sixth regiment advanced and occupied Philippiada for the third time without fighting. The Turks are still at Pentepegadia and Imerit has been fortified, the military bridge over the river at Arta (Aracht) having been destroyed.

Both Fleets Idle.

Athens, May 3.—Both the fleets remain idle. The populace continues indignant at the filling of the railway carriages with Crown Prince Constantine's baggage in the flight from Larissa despite the protest of the railway officials. The people say that they have been cheated and betrayed.

Retaken by Imperial Troops.

Washington, May 3.—The Turkish legation makes public the following dispatch from the foreign office at Constantinople: "According to a telegram received from the commandant of the army at Janina, Louros has just been retaken and occupied by the imperial troops."

No Indemnity Upon Greece.

London, May 3.—The Berlin correspondent of The Daily Mail learns that the powers will not consent to the levying of indemnity upon Greece and that both Austria and Germany are trying to induce the porte to modify its demands.

Protest of Ismail Pasha.

Canea, Crete, May 3.—Ismail Pasha, governor of the island, has protested against the decision of the admirals allowing food to be supplied to inhabitants in the interior. He demands cessation of the blockade or its complete re-establishment.

For Victory or Death.

London, May 3.—A dispatch from Paris says that 200 American volunteers for Greece have arrived there and gone on to Marseilles. They were all Greeks and all wore ribbons bearing the inscription "War for Victory or Death."

Peasantry Pouring In.

Arta, May 3.—The streets of Arta present a strange scene, with the continuous exodus of citizens and the steady incoming of the peasantry, who camp out in the streets around fires, with thousands of sheep and cattle.

Mediation Expected.

Athens, May 3.—Reports are current here that the powers are about to mediate between Greece and Turkey. The Italian and Austrian ministers have had a long interview with M. Balli and M. Scoullodis.

Greeks Are Inactive.

London, May 3.—A dispatch from Pharsalos says that 60,000 troops and 60 guns are concentrated there, but the Greeks are inactive and their position is weak.

At the Exposition Grounds.

Nashville, May 3.—At the exposition grounds the chief events were the closing public exercises of the Essenic knights and formal opening of the woman's building and all of its beautiful departments at 11 o'clock. Mrs. V. L. Kirkman, president of the woman's board, delivered the address of welcome, and addresses were delivered by Mrs. C. N. Grosvenor, vice president for West Tennessee, and Mrs. Mary B. Temple, vice president for East Tennessee.

POSTAL EXPERTS.

Universal Congress Ready to Meet In Washington.

SIXTY COUNTRIES REPRESENTED.

Delegates From Every Organized Government on the Globe, Save China, Korea and the Orange Free States, Will Participate In the Convention—How the Visitors Will Be Entertained.

Washington, May 3.—The postal operations of the world will pass in review before one of the most distinguished bodies that ever met in this country when the universal postal congress convenes in this city next Wednesday.

It is the first time that the universal postal union, now comprising and controlling, so far as the mails are concerned, every organized government save three—China, Korea and the Orange Free State—has had its delegates assemble in America, and the deliberation of its fifth biennial convention will be marked by perhaps more pronounced formality than has attended any convention of either national or international scope that has gathered in this country for a long period.

Sixty odd countries and provinces will be represented by about 120 delegates, each country having but a single vote. The sessions will be held in the historic old building which until recently was the home of the Corcoran art gallery. The delegates who will form the congress are men of the highest rank in postal service.

The postmasters general of several nations are among them, while leading diplomats have been sent by some of the countries.

A portion of the delegates already are here. Those who remain in New York will be brought over in a special train of four cars tendered by the Pennsylvania railroad.

Second Assistant Postmaster General Shallenberger and Superintendent of Foreign Mails Brooks are now in New York and will accompany the party to this city. The train will leave Jersey City soon after 1 p. m.

It is among the probabilities, based on precedent, that the delegates will be entertained by both the president and the postmaster general, and the district commissioners will, in case an appropriation they desire is granted, give an official reception and a water trip, probably to Old Point Comfort and Richmond.

The delegates, before the closing of the congress, will also be taken on a journey to the west, returning by way of New York.

The gathering will be in Washington from a month to six weeks, but the congress itself will meet not more than half a dozen times. The real work, save that of ratification of proceedings when committee reports—which belongs to the full congress—devolves upon the four committees.

IMPORTANT ACTION

Is Expected In the Senate During the Present Week.

Washington, May 3.—The senate resumed business in earnest and the week bids fair to be one of important results.

According to agreement a vote will be taken on the arbitration treaty on Wednesday. It is also quite probable that the committee vacancies will be filled and that the tariff bill will be reported to the senate.

For the rest, Senator Morgan will probably call up his Cuban resolution, the sundry civil appropriation bill may be passed, and Senator Hoar has given notice that he will move to have the committee on rules discharged from the further consideration of his amendments to the rules for the limitation of debates.

There is great uncertainty as to the fate of the treaty, and it now looks as if the margin would not exceed two or three votes, whatever the result may be. There are a few unascertained votes which will decide the result.

A canvass shows 40 votes certain for the treaty and 25 certain against it. Twenty-nine votes in opposition are sufficient to defeat it, but the opposition do not know just where those four votes can be found.

Juniata on the Rampage.

Huntingdon, Pa., May 3.—The incessant rainfall of the past 24 hours has unflowed the Juniata river and its numerous tributaries, causing thousands of dollars of destruction to growing crops. The farmers along the Raystown branch have suffered severe losses to buildings, fences and growing grains. The Juniata river is 16 feet above low water mark and is still rising.

WELLSVILLE.

OLD COUNCIL IS DEAD

Wellsville Has a New Set of Officers.

A LITTLE MONEY WAS BORROWED

The Office of Chief of Police Was Abolished, and Officer Cohagan Goes on the Night Force—Politics in the Appointment of the Fire Chief—Wellsville News.

The old council died and the new came to life last night.

In the last meeting of the old Mr. Armstrong suggested the jail be repaired, and it went over to the new council. Mayor Jones reported $52.06 from fines and $3.75 burial permits. Superintendent Fogo reported a balance of $2,344.80, and bills amounting to $1,041.16 were paid. The mayor and council were authorized to borrow $2,000 for four months for the general revenue. The old council then retired.

Mayor Jones administered the oath to the new members, and Mr. Michaels for the third time was elected president. Mr. Bowers is vice president. The mayor submitted these appointments: Chief of police, N. W. Cohagan; officers, A. C. Morgan, J. W. Johnson. Mr. Beacom moved an ordinance abolishing the office of chief be drawn, and it passed after much discussion. The officer will hold his position for a month. Mayor Jones then substituted the name of Cohagan for Johnson, and council confirmed the appointments. Squire Riley was made deputy mayor until Reverend Jones recovers his health.

It is said that an ordinance making the marshall the chief will be passed at the next meeting.

Politics figured in the appointment of fire chief, Charles Malone, retiring, being a Democrat, and H. E. Lowns, the new man, being a Republican. A. S. Rogers and G. B. Aten were made members of the board of equalization.

When the water works board organized J. W. Devore was sworn in, and R. W. Williamson was elected president and A. C. Fogo secretary.

The appointment of a new fire chief and the end of the chief of police was a surprise. There was some hustling for members of the board of equalization.

The new NEWS REVIEW is meeting with favorable comment everywhere. A Wellsville man, in comparing the different papers on the street the other night in the presence of a number of others, remarked that the NEWS REVIEW was certainly ahead in the pace for news and attractiveness.

ANGER CURED HIM.

A Cripple Threw Down His Crutches and Walked Away.

Yesterday the township trustees gave a man named Richard Dutton a pass to the infirmary. He was using crutches and was presumably very ill with rheumatism. He started to walk to Wellsville, and when he reached the West End pottery, stopped to inquire of Lyle Ashbaugh the right direction. He became abusive and was ordered out, when, to the surprise of all, he threw down the crutches and invited any man in the factory to come out and he would whip him. The fellow was evidently using the crutches as a blind to secure aid.

BACK DOORS WERE OPEN.

Some Saloons Did a Good Business on Sunday.

"I could have easily made 25 arrests last Sunday," said a resident who is authorized to make arrests. "A number of saloons were doing business all afternoon, and back doors were wide open. The jail would have been packed if all the drunks on the streets had been arrested, and the wagon would have been going every hour of the day. I'll admit the police did much better than usual, but there was some chance for improvement."

AFTER PAPER FIENDS.

Chief Johnson Is Determined to Stop the Practice.

There was a lot of paper on Fifth street this morning, and consequently Chief Johnson is busy looking up those who are responsible for its being there. "This thing of throwing paper on the streets must be stopped," said the officer, "and if I find out who put this paper here I will take them to the mayor's office. Last week I stopped several parties whom I happened to catch scattering paper, and if I catch any more it will go hard with them."

NO SPECIAL MEETING.

Council Will Let the Cook Street Matter Go Over.

There will in all probability be no special meeting of council to consider the Cook street improvement, as it is deemed by a majority of councilmen to be unnecessary. It takes 20 days to publish the notice of improvement before anything can be done toward grading the street, and before that time the regular meeting of council will be held. The Tanyard run matter has been investigated, and it can easily lay over for a few days.

Excursions to St. Louis.

Going to Be Married.

Henry Benty and Miss Margaret Hurst will be united in marriage this evening at 8 o'clock at the Evangelical Lutheran church by Rev. J. G. Reinartz. The young people are very well known in the city, and have many friends.

HALLUCINATIONS.

SOME OF THE CURIOUS EXAMPLES RECORDED IN HISTORY.

The Lives of Many Great Men Have Been Influenced by Visions—Frequently They Have Been Prophetic; at Other Times They Have Caused Tragedies.

The importance of the part played by dominant hallucinations in the history of the world can scarcely be overrated. Julius Caesar, Napoleon Bonaparte, Socrates, Luther, Ignatius Loyola, are but a few of the great men whose lives were intimately entwined with ruling delusions. In these cases the illusions seem to have been persistent and not to have been produced by any voluntary effort on the part of the seer. On the other hand, Talma could walk on to the stage and after staring at the brilliant and applauding audience for a few seconds would see nothing but rows of grinning skeletons. In this he seems to have forestalled Herr Roentgen, for the skeletons were in the exact positions of the members of the audience and changed their postures with every variation of their positions. It was to this grisly "house" that the great actor delivered some of his grandest histrionic efforts.

Goethe, as might be expected, called up pleasanter and more peaceful visions. At will he could see a flower in the center of his visual field. He thus described it: "This flower does not for a moment preserve its form; it is generally decomposed, and from its interior are born other flowers with colored, or sometimes green, petals. These are not natural flowers, but fantastic, nevertheless regular, figures, such as the roses of sculptors."

The capacity for thus producing at will a lovely object had, however, the disadvantage described by Abercrombie in his famous "Inquiry Concerning the Intellectual Powers," that they were not as a rule dismissible at pleasure. Blake, after studying a model seated in a chair, could continue seeing her clearly when the chair was empty. This must have been an economical way of hiring a subject by the hour and would be an acceptable talent in these days of highly feed models. The ghastly case described by Sir Walter Scott of the man who knew that he was dying, and knew equally well that there was nothing whatever the matter with him, is perhaps too familiar to need more than passing mention. The black cat that this luckless man saw was, to use his own words, "no household cat, but a bubble of the elements which has no existence." This animal was as complex in form as the seer's metaphor, for it would turn suddenly into a court usher, and the usher in his turn would become a skeleton. This man showed no symptoms of insanity and was fully aware of the unreality of what he saw, which must greatly have added to the persistent misery of his condition.

An old gentleman described by the late Dr. Elam had a power of conjuring up, often without voluntary effort, two or more charming dancing girls, and the antics of these nymphs continued until sleep came to the rescue. The old fellow was of a particularly pious and proper turn of mind, so that their gratuitous ballet was presumably wasted on him. Nicolai of Berlin, a very level headed savant, was troubled for two months with the vision of a corpse. The hallucination lasted as a rule exactly eight minutes, and the body was apparently always steady at a uniform distance of about ten feet from the observer.

This trouble supervened suddenly after a violent quarrel in which Nicolai had been engaged. Ultimately the corpse and all the poor man's other delusions were driven back to their own sphere by the prosaic attacks of leeches on the temples. This treatment was also most effective in dispelling the visions of a certain clergyman in Hampshire late in the last century. He habitually engaged in personal encounters with the devil, until the leeches drove the foul fiend out of his visual field. Dr. Bostock, the psychologist, saw the heads of his friends "in relief, like medallions." Curiously enough, he could never conjure up their bodies.

The great Napoleon was, as is generally known, invariably attended by a star. This story was implicitly believed at the time, and it is said to have been first related by General Rapp, who, on visiting the monarch's tent at night, found Bonaparte excitedly pointing to a corner of the tent, crying: "Do you see that—my star? It is shining there before you!" At the period of the reformation wrestling with the evil one in propria persona was by no means an uncommon exercise. Luther several times indulged in these combats. Mr. Lecky tells us of the young monk who rushed up to Sts. Pachonius and Palemon in the desert and told them excitedly of the beautiful woman who had tempted him in his cell and, "having worked her purpose," had vanished miraculously in the air, leaving him half dead upon the ground. The story goes on to say that the young monk, "with a wild shriek, broke away from his saintly listeners * * * and rushed across the desert till he arrived at the next village and there leaped into the open furnace of the public baths and perished in the flames."

Cazotte was reported to have habitually dreamed with his eyes open, so that at the dinner party when he suddenly said that he saw Condorcet, who was one of the guests, in prison and taking poison to avoid the headsman's ax nobody paid much attention. The event, however, happened within two years under the precise circumstances described.—London Standard.

MISS PARLOA ON SOUPS.

The French Housekeeper's Way of Making Them Described in a Lecture.

"Economy is the watchword of the French people," said Miss Parloa in her talk upon the characteristics of French cookery at the New York Young Woman's Christian association, "and the French housekeeper, no matter how simple the dish, excels in the making of it. The market prices are much higher in France than here, butter and sugar costing more than as much again. One may buy half a lemon or part of a carrot, and it is not thought unusual, and only a sufficient quantity is purchased to supply each meal, and an unexpected guest is never provided for."

Miss Parloa added that roasting and broiling are hardly known among the working classes, and pastry is made only in the kitchens of the very wealthy. An American housewife may take the lead in the making of dainty and fancy desserts, but to a Frenchwoman the making of soups and sauces is the most important part of the cookery.

The following simple soup is said to be savory and delicious: Put 3 tablespoonfuls of butter or meat fat in a soup kettle and pour over it 2 quarts of water. Let it cook 10 minutes before adding a pint of potatoes cut into cubes and 8 leeks washed and sliced thin. Add a teaspoonful of salt and one-third of pepper and allow this to cook very slowly one hour. Break 5 slices of stale bread into pieces and put in the soup tureen, and turn the soup over it when cooked the required length of time.

A French vegetable soup is made thus: Cut a large onion into thin slices and put them in a pan with 3 tablespoonfuls of butter. Let them simmer together half an hour and add 2 quarts of water. Have prepared a pint of white turnips cut into cubes, the same amount of potatoes, half a pint of carrots, half a pint of the white part of the leek cut into thin slices. Add a clove of garlic, an eschalot, a teaspoonful of sugar, one-third of a teaspoonful of pepper and salt and cook slowly an hour, adding some chopped parsley 15 minutes before the soup is removed from the fire. This soup may also be used for a vegetable puree by pressing it through a coarse sieve, and to a pint of the thick soup add a pint of boiling milk.

A paste for thickening sauces is kept at hand for constant use. Here is the way to make one that will keep a long time: Cut equal amounts of beef, veal and pork suet in small pieces. Put them in a kettle with very little water and slowly render. Turn off the first fat, and when very hot stir in flour until it forms a thick paste—about a pint of flour to a pint of liquid fat. Put these into a graniteware vessel and place in an oven and cook three to four hours. Keep in glass jars covered.

To Save the Table.

The useful table mat is a thing of the past, as every careful housekeeper must sometimes remember to her anguish when she essays to uncover her dining room table and finds its once glitteringly polished surface defaced here and there where hot dishes have been set down. When the carving is done at the table, folded napkins are sometimes placed underneath the cloth, but they are altogether too candid, and betray their presence by various uneven depressions and elevations. The best preventive of a ruined table, without taking refuge with the deposited mats, is a sheet of asbestos. This may be bought by the yard, and thus can be procured in different lengths to fit one's need of sometimes a small and sometimes an extended table. It will quite do away with any further worry, since no matter how carelessly a dish may be overheated it cannot harm the wood protected by asbestos. This should be placed, it may be added, next the table and beneath both linen cloth and the pad which gives the upper cloth its body and weight.

A Connecticut Legislator and His Bride.

Representative Perkins of Warren was in his seat when the session opened and beside him was the blushing young lady he had married the day before. In the course of the session Mr. Hall of William introduced a congratulatory resolution. Mr. Wortman of Bethel asked that there be a rising vote. Speaker Barbour remarked:

"The chair, having taken pains to learn that a resolution of this kind will not be distasteful, he hopes to see it adopted, and at the same time would personally extend his congratulations."

The resolution was passed by a rising vote and with much laughter. The young couple were as ruddy as a Senator Lounsbury apple. Dr. Whiton of Manchester exclaimed, "Now tell the unmarried men, 'Go thou and do likewise.'"

Speaker Barbour—The gentleman has permission to introduce a bill to that effect.—Hartford Courant.

Mills Closed by a Sheriff.

DAYTON, May 1.—The Kratochewili Milling company's flouring mills here have been closed by the sheriff on a judgment taken out by the Citizens' National bank of Cincinnati for $40,000. Later a suit was filed by the National Park bank of New York for $25,000 on account. The mills will probably be sold by the sheriff.

PEOPLE WE KNOW.

They are East Liverpool People, and What they say is of Local Interest.

When an incident like the following occurs right here at home it is bound to carry weight with our readers. The public statement of a reputable citizen living right here at home, one whom you can see every day, leaves no ground for the skeptic to stand on:

Mrs. A. Searight, No. 152 High street, East End, says: "I had a severe attack of kidney disease over a year ago which confined me to my bed for about three months. It affected my entire system and while I have been able to be about I never got completely rid of it. I suffered almost constantly with a dull heavy pain across the loins; if I sat for any length of time, or did anything that brought me into a stooping position and attempted to rise, there would be a sharp shooting pain in the small of my back that felt as if a knife or other sharp instrument had pierced me. I could not sleep when I went to bed, expecting to get rest. I was often robbed of it by nervousness and pain in my back. I have risen unrefreshed and more tired and worn out than I was when I retired. I had taken so much medicine without being cured that I was discouraged. I belong to the Daughters of Liberty and the Maccabees and notified them to drop me, but they refused to do so; this made me more determined than ever to get well, as I did not want to be a burden to them. Doan's Kidney Pills presented themselves in the form of a newspaper account. I got some at the W. and W. Pharmacy. They proved to be the proper remedy for me. Their mild and gentle influence gradually reduced the pain in my back and strengthened the weakness. I am not suffering in any way since taking them, all the symptoms having disappeared. I rest well at night and am gaining in strength and weight every day. Of course I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills; it would not be right to refuse to, for the benefit of other sufferers."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

OLD COUNCIL IS DEAD

Wellsville Has a New Set of Officers.

A LITTLE MONEY WAS BORROWED

The Office of Chief of Police Was Abolished, and Officer Cohagan Goes on the Night Force—Politics in the Appointment of the Fire Chief—Wellsville News.

The old council died and the new came to life last night.

In the last meeting of the old Mr. Armstrong suggested the jail be repaired, and it went over to the new council. Mayor Jones reported $52.06 from fines and $3.75 burial permits. Superintendent Fogo reported a balance of $2,344.80, and bills amounting to $1,041.16 were paid. The mayor and council were authorized to borrow $2,000 for four months for the general revenue. The old council then retired.

Mayor Jones administered the oath to the new members, and Mr. Michaels for the third time was elected president. Mr. Bowers is vice president. The mayor submitted these appointments: Chief of police, N. W. Cohagan; officers, A. C. Morgan, J. W. Johnson. Mr. Beacom moved an ordinance abolishing the office of chief be drawn, and it passed after much discussion. The officer will hold his position for a month. Mayor Jones then substituted the name of Cohagan for Johnson, and council confirmed the appointments. Squire Riley was made deputy mayor until Reverend Jones recovers his health.

It is said that an ordinance making the marshal the chief will be passed at the next meeting.

Politics figured in the appointment of fire chief, Charles Malone, retiring, being a Democrat, and H. E. Lowms, the new man, being a Republican. A. S. Rogers and G. B. Aten were made members of the board of equalization.

When the water works board organized J. W. Devore was sworn in, and R. W. Williamson was elected president and A. C. Fogo secretary.

The appointment of a new fire chief and the end of the chief of police was a surprise. There was some hustling for members of the board of equalization.

The News of Wellsville.

Robert Kelly moved today to the Bunting farm below the city.

Miss Nannie Brown has gone to Moscow to teach school.

An ex-member of Wellsville's "finest" turned up in mayor's court for drunkenness, and received the usual fine.

R. A. Whiston, agent of the Buckeye Building and Loan association, of Bellaire, has organized branches in Wellsville, Irondale and Salineville.

William Haney and wife, of Toronto, were attending the funeral of a relative at Yellow Creek church, returning home yesterday.

The Barber's Protective association met last night at R. R. Rolley's shop, and elected new officers.

The Cleveland and Pittsburg work train is doing some effective work out the main line.

Samuel Wyant, a well known Toronto citizen, passed through Wellsville, today, bound for New Castle, Pa., where he has been employed for some months on building contracts.

Sherman Blackburn and James Rany, of East Palestine, were in Wellsville last evening.

Rumor says that a prominent Wellsville man and wife will figure in the divorce court shortly.

Jake Morrison, the gentlemanly clerk of Hotel Fuller, had one of his hands severely cut, accidentally, by a razor in the hands of a tonsorial artist on Main street Saturday night.

The shipments from the Kenilworth firebrick works, on the opposite side of the Ohio, continue brisk, eight or ten cars now being loaded.

The new NEWS REVIEW is meeting with favorable comment everywhere. A Wellsville man, in comparing the different papers on the street the other night in the presence of a number of others, remarked that the NEWS REVIEW was certainly ahead in the pace for news and attractiveness.

PADDEN'S GOOD PLAYING

Is Making a Name For Him In Pittsburgh.

Dick Padden in the six games played with Pittsburgh leads the club in batting with a record as follows: 23 times at bat, no runs, 10 hits, average of .434. His fielding average is 16 putouts, and assists, 2 errors, average .945. In the number of total bases made he is second with one stolen base, no strike outs, two two base hits, one three base hit, total bases 14.

Mercer pitched poor ball yesterday against the New York team and was pounded for 7 runs in the second inning Swain taking his place in the box. Seymour the pitcher for the Giants only gave the Washington club one hit. The score was 9 to 0 in favor of New York.

ANGER CURED HIM.

A Cripple Threw Down His Crutches and Walked Away.

Yesterday the township trustees gave a man named Richard Dutton a pass to the infirmary. He was using crutches and was presumably very ill with rheumatism. He started to walk to Wellsville, and when he reached the West End pottery, stopped to inquire of Lyle Ashbaugh the right direction. He became abusive and was ordered out, when, to the surprise of all, he threw down the crutches and invited any man in the factory to come out and he would whip him. The fellow was evidently using the crutches as a blind to secure aid.

BACK DOORS WERE OPEN.

Some Saloons Did a Good Business on Sunday.

"I could have easily made 25 arrests last Sunday," said a resident who is authorized to make arrests. "A number of saloons were doing business all afternoon, and back doors were wide open. The jail would have been packed if all the drunks on the streets had been arrested, and the wagon would have been going every hour of the day. I'll admit the police did much better than usual, but there was some chance for improvement."

AFTER PAPER FIENDS.

Chief Johnson Is Determined to Stop the Practice.

There was a lot of paper on Fifth street this morning, and consequently Chief Johnson is busy looking up those who are responsible for its being there. "This thing of throwing paper on the streets must be stopped," said the officer, "and if I find out who put this paper here I will take them to the mayor's office. Last week I stopped several parties whom I happened to catch scattering paper, and if I catch any more it will go hard with them."

NO SPECIAL MEETING.

Council Will Let the Cook Street Matter Go Over.

There will in all probability be no special meeting of council to consider the Cook street improvement, as it is deemed by a majority of councilmen to be unnecessary. It takes 20 days to publish the notice of improvement before anything can be done toward grading the street, and before that time the regular meeting of council will be held. The Tanyard run matter has been investigated, and it can easily lay over for a few days.

HALLUCINATIONS.

SOME OF THE CURIOUS EXAMPLES RECORDED IN HISTORY.

The Lives of Many Great Men Have Been Influenced by Visions—Frequently They Have Been Prophetic; at Other Times They Have Caused Tragedies.

The importance of the part played by dominant hallucinations in the history of the world can scarcely be overrated. Julius Caesar, Napoleon Bonaparte, Socrates, Luther, Ignatius Loyola, are but a few of the great men whose lives were intimately entwined with ruling delusions. In these cases the illusions seem to have been persistent and not to have been produced by any voluntary effort on the part of the seer. On the other hand, Talma could walk on to the stage and after staring at the brilliant and applauding audience for a few seconds would see nothing but rows of grinning skeletons. In this he seems to have forestalled Herr Roentgen, for the skeletons were in the exact positions of the members of the audience and changed their postures with every variation of their positions. It was to this grisly "house" that the great actor delivered some of his grandest histrionic efforts.

Goethe, as might be expected, called up pleasanter and more peaceful visions. At will he could see a flower in the center of his visual field. He thus described it: "This flower does not for a moment preserve its form; it is generally decomposed, and from its interior are born other flowers with colored, or sometimes green, petals. These are not natural flowers, but fantastic, nevertheless regular, figures, such as the roses of sculptors."

The capacity for thus producing at will a lovely object had, however, the disadvantage described by Abercrombie in his famous "Inquiry Concerning the Intellectual Powers," that they were not as a rule dismissible at pleasure. Blake, after studying a model seated in a chair, could continue seeing her clearly when the chair was empty. This must have been an economical way of hiring a subject by the hour and would be an acceptable talent in these days of highly feed models. The ghastly case described by Sir Walter Scott of the man who knew that he was dying, and knew equally well that there was nothing whatever the matter with him, is perhaps too familiar to need more than passing mention. The black cat that this luckless man saw was, to use his own words, "no household cat, but a bubble of the elements which has no existence." This animal was as complex in form as the seer's metaphor, for it would turn suddenly into a court usher, and the usher in his turn would become a skeleton. This man showed no symptoms of insanity and was fully aware of the unreality of what he saw, which must greatly have added to the persistent misery of his condition.

An old gentleman described by the late Dr. Elam had a power of conjuring up, often without voluntary effort, two or more charming dancing girls, and the antics of these nymphs continued until sleep came to the rescue. The old fellow was of a particularly pious and proper turn of mind, so that their gratuitous ballet was presumably wasted on him. Nicolai of Berlin, a very level headed savant, was troubled for two months with the vision of a corpse. The hallucination lasted as a rule exactly eight minutes, and the body was apparently always steady at a uniform distance of about ten feet from the observer.

This trouble supervened suddenly after a violent quarrel in which Nicolai had been engaged. Ultimately the corpse and all the poor man's other delusions were driven back to their own sphere by the prosaic attacks of leeches on the temples. This treatment was also most effective in dispelling the visions of a certain clergyman in Hampshire late in the last century. He habitually engaged in personal encounters with the devil, until the leeches drove the foul fiend out of his visual field. Dr. Bostock, the psychologist, saw the heads of his friends "in relief, like medallions." Curiously enough, he could never conjure up their bodies.

The great Napoleon was, as is generally known, invariably attended by a star. This story was implicitly believed at the time, and it is said to have been first related by General Rapp, who, on visiting the monarch's tent at night, found Bonaparte excitedly pointing to a corner of the tent, crying: "Do you see that—my star? It is shining there before you!" At the period of the reformation wrestling with the evil one in propria persona was by no means an uncommon exercise. Luther several times indulged in these combats. Mr. Lecky tells us of the young monk who rushed up to Sts. Pachonius and Palamon in the desert and told them excitedly of the beautiful woman who had tempted him in his cell and, "having worked her purpose," had vanished miraculously in the air, leaving him half dead upon the ground. The story goes on to say that the young monk, "with a wild shriek, broke away from his saintly listeners * * * and rushed across the desert till he arrived at the next village and there leaped into the open furnace of the public baths and perished in the flames."

Cazotte was reported to have habitually dreamed with his eyes open, so that at the dinner party when he suddenly said that he saw Condorcet, who was one of the guests, in prison and taking poison to avoid the headsman's ax nobody paid much attention. The event, however, happened within two years under the precise circumstances described.—London Standard.

MISS PARLOA ON SOUPS.

The French Housekeeper's Way of Making Them Described in a Lecture.

"Economy is the watchword of the French people," said Miss Parloa in her talk upon the characteristics of French cookery at the New York Young Woman's Christian association, "and the French housekeeper, no matter how simple the dish, excels in the making of it. The market prices are much higher in France than here, butter and sugar costing more than as much again. One may buy half a lemon or part of a carrot, and it is not thought unusual, and only a sufficient quantity is purchased to supply each meal, and an unexpected guest is never provided for."

Miss Parloa added that roasting and broiling are hardly known among the working classes, and pastry is made only in the kitchens of the very wealthy. An American housewife may take the lead in the making of dainty and fancy desserts, but to a Frenchwoman the making of soups and sauces is the most important part of the cookery.

The following simple soup is said to be savory and delicious: Put 3 tablespoonfuls of butter or meat fat in a soup kettle and pour over it 2 quarts of water. Let it cook 10 minutes before adding a pint of potatoes cut into cubes and 8 leeks washed and sliced thin. Add a teaspoonful of salt and one-third of pepper and allow this to cook very slowly one hour. Break 5 slices of stale bread into pieces and put in the soup tureen, and turn the soup over it when cooked the required length of time.

A French vegetable soup is made thus: Cut a large onion into thin slices and put them in a pan with 3 tablespoonfuls of butter. Let them simmer together half an hour and add 2 quarts of water. Have prepared a pint of white turnips cut into cubes, the same amount of potatoes, half a pint of carrots, half a pint of the white part of the leek cut into thin slices. Add a clove of garlic, an eschalot, a teaspoonful of sugar, one-third of a teaspoonful of pepper and salt and cook slowly an hour, adding some chopped parsley 15 minutes before the soup is removed from the fire. This soup may also be used for a vegetable puree by pressing it through a coarse sieve, and to a pint of the thick soup add a pint of boiling milk.

A paste for thickening sauces is kept at hand for constant use. Here is the way to make one that will keep a long time: Cut equal amounts of beef, veal and pork suet in small pieces. Put them in a kettle with very little water and slowly render. Turn off the first fat, and when very hot stir in flour until it forms a thick paste—about a pint of flour to a pint of liquid fat. Put these into a graniteware vessel and place in an oven and cook three to four hours. Keep in glass jars covered.

To Save the Table.

The useful table mat is a thing of the past, as every careful housekeeper must sometimes remember to her anguish when she essays to uncover her dining room table and finds its once glitteringly polished surface defaced here and there where hot dishes have been set down. When the carving is done at the table, folded napkins are sometimes placed underneath the cloth, but they are altogether too candid, and betray their presence by various uneven depressions and elevations. The best preventive of a ruined table, without taking refuge with the deposited mats, is a sheet of asbestos. This may be bought by the yard, and thus can be procured in different lengths to fit one's need of sometimes a small and sometimes an extended table. It will quite do away with any further worry, since no matter how carelessly a dish may be overheated it cannot harm the wood protected by asbestos. This should be placed, it may be added, next the table and beneath both linen cloth and the pad which gives the upper cloth its body and weight.

A Connecticut Legislator and His Bride.

Representative Perkins of Warren was in his seat when the session opened and beside him was the blushing young lady he had married the day before. In the course of the session Mr. Hall of William introduced a congratulatory resolution. Mr. Wortman of Bethel asked that there be a rising vote. Speaker Barbour remarked:

"The chair, having taken pains to learn that a resolution of this kind will not be distasteful, he hopes to see it adopted, and at the same time would personally extend his congratulations."

The resolution was passed by a rising vote and with much laughter. The young couple were as ruddy as a Senator Lounsbury apple. Dr. Whiton of Manchester exclaimed, "Now tell the unmarried men, 'Go thou and do likewise.'"

Speaker Barbour—The gentleman has permission to introduce a bill to that effect.—Hartford Courant.

Mills Closed by a Sheriff.

DAYTON, May 1.—The Kratochwill Milling company's flouring mills here have been closed by the sheriff on a judgment taken out by the Citizens' National bank of Cincinnati for $40,000. Later a suit was filed by the National Park bank of New York for $25,000 on account. The mills will probably be sold by the sheriff.

When an incident like the following occurs right here at home it is bound to carry weight with our readers. The public statement of a reputable citizen living right here at home, one whom you can see every day, leaves no ground for the skeptic to stand on:

Mrs. A. Searight, No. 152 High street, East End, says: "I had a severe attack of kidney disease over a year ago which confined me to my bed for about three months. It affected my entire system and while I have been able to be about I never got completely rid of it. I suffered almost constantly with a dull heavy pain across the loins; if I sat for any length of time, or did anything that brought me into a stooping position and attempted to rise, there would be a sharp shooting pain in the small of my back that felt as if a knife or other sharp instrument had pierced me. I could not sleep when I went to bed, expecting to get rest. I was often robbed of it by nervousness and pain in my back. I have risen unrefreshed and more tired and worn out than I was when I retired. I had taken so much medicine without being cured that I was discouraged. I belong to the Daughters of Liberty and the Macabees and notified them to drop me, but they refused to do so; this made me more determined than ever to get well, as I did not want to be a burden to them. Doan's Kidney Pills presented themselves in the form of a newspaper account. I got some at the W. and W. Pharmacy. They proved to be the proper remedy for me. Their mild and gentle influence gradually reduced the pain in my back and strengthened the weakness. I am not suffering in any way since taking them, all the symptoms having disappeared. I rest well at night and am gaining in strength and weight every day. Of course I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills; it would not be right to refuse to, for the benefit of other sufferers."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

CAN'T FILL THE BOTTLE

A Glassworker Seems to Have Solved a Problem.

IT REALLY HAS TWO STOPPERS

The Neck Must Be Knocked Off Before the Cork Can Be Drawn—Henry Aufderheide Already Has a Silver Medal For His Useful Device.

H. W. Aufderheide, foreman of the cutting shop at the Specialty glass works has applied for a patent on a non-refillable bottle, which promises to be a good thing.

The bottle is like an ordinary bottle to the shoulder and neck, but ends in a bulb of wider dimensions than the neck.

The opening at the top of the bulb is large enough to insert the cork, which is easily forced in its place in the neck below the bulb. The bulb is then filled with cement over the cork, and a metallic cap with extension spring arms is inserted, and perfectly closes the bottle. An incision under the bulb makes the glass at the top of the neck thinner than at any other point, and a rap on the under side of the cement filled bulb knocks it off and discloses the cork for removal.

The invention was first sent to a firm of Washington patent lawyers who offered a medal for the simplest and best invention. Of a large number of competitors Mr. Aufderheide was awarded first prize, and now has in his possession a handsome silver medal. He has made no effort as yet to sell the right to manufacture the bottle as the mould was completed but a few days ago.

TWO WEDDINGS

Before Magowan Was Satisfied the Knot Was Tied.

A special from Trenton has this news: "Ex-Mayor Frank A. Magowan, who made his appearance in Trenton last night with Mrs. Barnes and installed her in the mansion adjoining that occupied by his former wife, gave out a statement tonight that he and Mrs. Barnes were married a second time on Dec. 17, last, in Camden, N. J. He said the ceremony, was performed by Justice of the Peace Evans.

"Mrs. Barnes tonight showed the marriage certificate and a certified copy of the report of the marriage sent to City Clerk Varney by Justice Evans. This second marriage was for the purpose of overcoming any possibility of the Milwaukee marriage being declared invalid."

TORE HIS TROUSERS.

The Unhappy End of a Lesson in Bicycle Riding.

Byron Beatty last evening was learning to ride a bicycle in the Diamond. The wheel in some way started for a wagon which was standing near a curb, and, as Beatty was unable to stop it, he, as Beatty for somebody to guide him. Merchants lost no time in getting to the scene as they supposed someone was getting seriously hurt, but they were too late. The bicycle struck the rear wheel of the wagon, and the rider performed a few acrobatic feats alighting on his hands and knees on the ground. The bicycle was not injured, but Mr. Beatty's trousers were torn.

About 9 o'clock last evening Mrs. John Kennedy, of Second street opened a window upstairs, and shouted that a man was trying to get into the house. Two young men who were passing on the opposite side of the street ran to the house at once. When they arrived they found a young man considerably under the influence of liquor trying to enter. EAST LIVERPOOL, O., TUESDAY, MAY 4

THE Grecian war moves on its weary way, and skirmish after skirmish shows more plainly every day that there can be but one end to the struggle.

THE political prophets say that the Republican convention will be held in Toledo in June, a very good place for the carrying out of a very good program.

IF Turkey owed less money in England, France and Germany the Greeks would not battle single handed and alone against the sick man and his brutal soldiery.

THE determination of Attorney General Monnett to oust the insurance trust is being vigorously carried out, and the prospects are bright for a better condition in Ohio before summer comes again.

BUSINESS is better. The government's postal receipts for the last quarter were the largest for the same time in the history of the department. When times are hard people do not waste their spare change buying stamps.

THE farmer who is opposed to high taxes should prepare to vote the Republican ticket next fall. It is almost three quarters of a century since Ohio was financially so well off as it is today. The administration of Governor Bushnell could not have been more businesslike and efficient.

THE Salem Herald probably cares nothing for the patronage of the workmen of that easy going town. The other day it remarked editorially that Shakespeare probably had the workmen of America in mind when he wrote "What fools these mortals be." The Herald is uncompromisingly a free silver paper.

ALLEN THURMAN is working the Democratic press pretty hard for its indorsement of his candidacy for governor, but that isn't votes. The bandana statesman has been so often before them that his aims and aspirations come in nicely to fill a little space when copy is short. They know about all there is to know of Allen.

THE food commissioner, acting upon the supposition that certain ingredients make bad whisky worse whisky, has determined to bring the dealers to time without delay. Now if he only can decide that there is no pure whisky sold in Ohio and order all the stuff confiscated there may be some excuse for his continued official existence.

WATCHING OHIO.

THE eyes of the east are upon Ohio. Politicians in New York and Washington are carefully watching the trend of events in this state, and prophesying as their knowledge or imagination prompts them. They know that an important battle will soon be fought, and the ranks of the opposing forces are being arranged for the preliminary struggle. The fight this year promises to be one in which the whole country will be so deeply interested that every move will be observed with interest. There is much at stake.

A BIG DAY.

If the men this nation has sent to the senate are wise, they will read that Saturday was one of the largest days in the history of the New York custom house, and then hasten to pass the tariff bill. The importers are rushing in goods as fast as they can be brought from Europe, and on that day alone duties to the amount of almost two and a half millions were paid. If the delay is to continue it simply means that the country will be stuffed full of foreign wares, and months must elapse before any good arising from the tariff law can be felt.

WOES OF A CONSTABLE

Officer Lyon Made a Family Move Out,

BUT NOT WITHOUT TROUBLE

They Locked the Door, and He Broke It Down--Later There Was a Scene In the Squire's Office, but He Refused to Consider the Case.

Constable Lyon had an experience while enforcing the law in a forcible detention case, as the people upon whom notice had been served did not care to move.

Several days ago Ida Bradley was given judgment in a forcible detention case against Robert Bradley, and a writ of restitution was issued. Yesterday was the last day for the people to possess the property, and in the afternoon the constable went to the West End with the determination to see that they moved before evening. When he arrived the inmates saw him first, and locked the door. Nothing daunted, the constable threw all his force against the door, and broke it open. He then had some words with Morey Bradley, and to end the matter the constable sent in a patrol alarm, but before the wagon arrived Morey had disappeared from view. The house was vacated before evening, and all was apparently serene and peaceful.

This was not the end of the trouble, as Morey had not been conquered, but only subdued. Last evening in company with a lady who was staying at the house when the trouble occurred, he appeared at the office of a justice of the peace. She wanted to have the constable arrested for assault and battery, claiming he had taken her by the shoulders and thrown her against the wall. The costs were not forthcoming, however, and the squire refused to take the case. Morey then related how the constable had appeared at the house and stated that he had thrown him out, but the constable has no recollection of this. The couple left the office after a lengthy stay, and said they would go to the office of the mayor and enter a complaint, but they had not arrived at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Help For Starving India.

The Christian Workers' committee today forwarded $134.05, making a total of $250.88. Of this sum $8.16 was contributed by the North Side chapel; $7.88 by the M. P. Sunday school, and $5.40 by the Cheerful Workers' circle of King's Daughters, of the M. P. church, the rest being secured through the Workers in a house to house canvass. Everybody's Mission school also sent $3.25 some time ago. Contributions may be left at F. W. Poland's, or Kelsey Bennett's, corner of Broadway and Washington.

ALL WILL TAKE PART.

A New Arrangement For Commencement Exercises.

The board of education in the past week have held secret sessions, but not until today did the object of the meetings become known. It seems that the arrangements to have only eleven of the graduates take part in the commencement exercises did not altogether suit them, and it was decided that all should take some part, and Professor Sanor yesterday notified the class of the decision.

A UNION BROKE

And the New Building In the Midway Took Fire.

By the breaking of a gas union in the Midway yesterday afternoon, fire was communicated to the new building under course of erection in the rear of the syndicate block. The flames were under the floor, and when the department arrived much difficulty was experienced in reaching the blaze. At length the Babcocks put out the fire.

Importers Will Quit.

A well-known gentleman of this city recently talked with one of the leading importers of the country, and was informed that if a specific duty was levied on crockery he would cancel every order on the other side and go into the manufacturing business here.

Buried Today.

The funeral of Mrs. Jackson Watson took place this afternoon at 3 o'clock from her late residence on Pleasant street. The services were largely attended. The interment was in River-view. Reverend Salmon, of the East End, officiated.

Ill at Her Home.

Mrs. Alice Staneway is ill at her home in Second street with pneumonia. Her condition is serious.

MAY SNOW.

Ohio Crops Are Thought to Be Injured by Cold Snap.

Cincinnati, May 3.—Considerable snow fell here and throughout southern Ohio. At several points the boys were reported as enjoying the unusual sport of playing snowball in May.

The temperature is so low that much damage has been done throughout the Ohio valley. Preceding the snow there was a constant fall of rain for 24 hours. The Ohio river and all its tributaries are rising rapidly.

Bogus Count Exposed.

Columbus, O., May 3.—William Mickel of Darmstadt, Hesse, Germany, was ordered to leave Ohio by Prosecuting Attorney Dyer under pain of prosecution. Several years ago Miss Marie Pletsche, a wealthy young heiress, went to Darmstadt to visit an aged grandmother. While there she made the acquaintance of Mickel, who represented himself to be the heir of a German count, and in line for a vast estate and a noble title. He made violent love to the young German-American girl, and she loved in return. He learned that she had $10,000 to the credit of herself and brother in a German bank, and that only added to his love. Miss Pletsche introduced the "Count" to her friends here, from whom he borrowed various amounts. A letter to the authorities from his wife exposed him.

For Sunday Ball.

Cleveland, May 3.—President Robison of the Cleveland baseball club stated that he intended to let his team play Sunday games, notwithstanding the declaration of the mayor that the state law would be enforced. Mr. Robison proposes to let his players be arrested, and in that way test the validity of the law and the city ordinance against Sunday ball.

Death of a Pioneer.

Cleveland, May 3.—Miller M. Spangler, one of the pioneers of Cleveland, died at the age of 84. He was one of the first chiefs of the volunteer fire department, and was for two terms sheriff of the county. He was the head of the house of M. M. Spangler & Company, maltsters, and was the owner of much valuable real estate.

Big Blaze at Bradner.

Bradner, O., May 3.—This place was visited by a disastrous fire which almost wiped out the business portion of the town, causing a loss estimated at $50,000, and causing the death of Mrs. Simon Welch, 45, of heart disease. The fire started from a gas jet in J. C. Sheet's livery stable.

Winter Returns.

Cleveland, May 3.—Dispatches from towns in the interior of the state say that the rain turned into snow, and in many places wintry conditions prevailed. At Bucyrus three inches of snow fell, and at Martin's Ferry, in the southeastern part of the state, the ground was covered with it.

Carpenter's Narrow Escape.

Portsmouth, O., May 3.—Dave Reed, a carpenter, while working at the top of the Burgess iron mill, fell to the ground 40 feet below. He struck a pile of sand between two timbers, the sand giving and saving his life. His arm was broken.

Drowned In a Creek.

Manchester, O., May 3.—While A. C. Wallace, with two companions, was attempting to cross Island creek, which had been swollen by a cloudburst, the wagon was overturned and he was drowned.

Struck by Lightning.

Columbus, O., May 3.—Charles McCann of Franklin county, while plowing during a thunderstorm, was perhaps fatally shocked by the same bolt of lightning that killed one of his horses.

Injured In a Runaway.

Kent, O., May 3.—Eli Heckman was thrown from his carriage in a runaway and seriously injured.

Fire In a Mining Town.

Nanticoke, Pa., May 3.—A disastrous fire occurred in Glen Lion, a mining town five miles from Nanticoke. It originated in Kennedy's hotel and that structure was entirely consumed, together with a large dwelling house and bottling works, all the property of P. S. Kennedy. The fire was the work of an incendiary. The damage is over $10,000, with light insurance.

Condition of Survivors.

St. Johns, May 3.—The surgeons performed amputation upon the four Vaillant survivors. Two, who lost their hands and lower part of their legs, are not expected to recover. The other two, who underwent similar operations, are somewhat better off. The remaining four are still very weak. None of the eight can be said to be out of danger.

Boats For North Atlantic Station.

Washington, May 3.—The first result of the laying up of the big cruiser Columbia is manifested in the preparation of orders by the navy department for the commissioning of the two new gunboats Helena and Annapolis. The Helena will go into active service for the first time on June 1 and the Annapolis a week later. These boats will be kept on the north Atlantic station for about three months.

WHOLESALE ROBBERING.

About $17,000 Worth of Lumber Said to Be Unaccounted For.

Frankfort, Ky., May 3.—The senate special committee which began an investigation of the local penitentiary several weeks ago will resume operations with a vim. A big sensation, involving a number of as yet unknown parties, has been sprung at the prison. This time it is a money matter and not a scandal affecting the name of prison officials.

It has been discovered by state officials who have been paying penitentiary accounts that the prison is short 1,000,000 feet of lumber, worth $17,000, and that the amount has been paid out, for which no arrests have been made, but is charged that a dozen men are involved and the matter will be far-reaching, though only a few underlings are charged with guilt.

The sinking commissioners will talk but little, though they admit something very serious is wrong, and that they have been trying to learn by a quiet investigation wherein the trouble lies.

GIGANTIC ENTERPRISE.

English Capitalists Propose to Establish a Colony In Mexico.

City of Mexico, May 3.—An important company has been incorporated here with $1,000,000 capital, the larger part of the shares being taken by Pearson & Son, English contractors, having in hand the drainage of the valley of Mexico and the port works at Vera Cruz, with a few Mexican shareholders.

The new company will be known as the Mexican Land, Navigation and Railway company. The first object of the company is to build a railway from suitable point on the National Tehantepec road to a desirable point in the state of Vera Cruz. The government gives a subsidy of over 8,000 acres of public lands per kilometer of railway construction. On some 400,000 acres of land thus acquired the company will settle European and other colonists.

Tariff Bill Not Ready.

Washington, May 3.—The tariff bill as amended will not be given to the finance committee. No meeting of the committee, as originally intended, will be held. The reason given for this is the absence of Senator Platt of Connecticut, a member of the subcommittee on tariff. Some questions have arisen in the past few days concerning which it is considered necessary to consult the Connecticut senator, and he has found it impossible to reach the city until too late for the meeting. A meeting probably will be held Tuesday. The Republican members will, in the meantime, continue their efforts to have the Democrats fix a time for reporting the bill.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., TUESDAY, MAY 4

THE Grecian war moves on its weary way, and skirmish after skirmish shows more plainly every day that there can be but one end to the struggle.

THE political prophets say that the Republican convention will be held in Toledo in June, a very good place for the carrying out of a very good program.

IF Turkey owed less money in England, France and Germany the Greeks would not battle single handed and alone against the sick man and his brutal soldiery.

THE determination of Attorney General Monnett to oust the insurance trust is being vigorously carried out, and the prospects are bright for a better condition in Ohio before summer comes again.

BUSINESS is better. The government's postal receipts for the last quarter were the largest for the same time in the history of the department. When times are hard people do not waste their spare change buying stamps.

THE farmer who is opposed to high taxes should prepare to vote the Republican ticket next fall. It is almost three quarters of a century since Ohio was financially so well off as it is today. The administration of Governor Bushnell could not have been more businesslike and efficient.

THE Salem Herald probably cares nothing for the patronage of the workmen of that easy going town. The other day it remarked editorially that Shakespeare probably had the workmen of America in mind when he wrote "What fools these mortals be." The Herald is uncompromisingly a free silver paper.

ALLEN THURMAN is working the Democratic press pretty hard for its endorsement of his candidacy for governor, but that isn't votes. The bandana statesman has been so often before them that his aims and aspirations come in nicely to fill a little space when copy is short. They know about all there is to know of Allen.

THE food commissioner, acting upon the supposition that certain ingredients make bad whisky worse whisky, has determined to bring the dealers to time without delay. Now if he only can decide that there is no pure whisky sold in Ohio and order all the stuff confiscated there may be some excuse for his continued official existence.

WATCHING OHIO.

THE eyes of the east are upon Ohio. Politicians in New York and Washington are carefully watching the trend of events in this state, and prophesying as their knowledge or imagination prompts them. They know that an important battle will soon be fought, and the ranks of the opposing forces are being arranged for the preliminary struggle. The fight this year promises to be one in which the whole country will be so deeply interested that every move will be observed with interest. There is much at stake.

A BIG DAY.

If the men this nation has sent to the senate are wise, they will read that Saturday was one of the largest days in the history of the New York custom house, and then hasten to pass the tariff bill. The importers are rushing in goods as fast as they can be brought from Europe, and on that day alone duties to the amount of almost two and a half millions were paid. If the delay is to continue it simply means that the country will be stuffed full of foreign wares, and months must elapse before any good arising from the tariff law can be felt.

WOES OF A CONSTABLE

Officer Lyon Made a Family Move Out,

BUT NOT WITHOUT TROUBLE

They Locked the Door, and He Broke It Down--Later There Was a Scene In the Squire's Office, but He Refused to Consider the Case.

Constable Lyon had an experience while enforcing the law in a forcible detention case, as the people upon whom notice had been served did not care to move.

Several days ago Ida Bradley was given judgment in a forcible detention case against Robert Bradley, and a writ of restitution was issued. Yesterday was the last day for the people to possess the property, and in the afternoon the constable went to the West End with the determination to see that they moved before evening. When he arrived the inmates saw him first, and locked the door. Nothing daunted, the constable threw all his force against the door, and broke it open. He then had some words with Morey Bradley, and to end the matter the constable sent in a patrol alarm, but before the wagon arrived Morey had disappeared from view. The house was vacated before evening, and all was apparently serene and peaceful.

This was not the end of the trouble, as Morey had not been conquered, but only subdued. Last evening in company with a lady who was staying at the house when the trouble occurred, he appeared at the office of a justice of the peace. She wanted to have the constable arrested for assault and battery, claiming he had taken her by the shoulders and thrown her against the wall. The costs were not forthcoming, however, and the squire refused to take the case. Morey then related how the constable had appeared at the house and stated that he had thrown him out, but the constable has no recollection of this. The couple left the office after a lengthy stay, and said they would go to the office of the mayor and enter a complaint, but they had not arrived at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Help For Starving India.

The Christian Workers' committee today forwarded $134.05, making a total of $250.88. Of this sum $8.16 was contributed by the North Side chapel; $7.88 by the M. P. Sunday school, and $5.40 by the Cheerful Workers' circle of King's Daughters, of the M. P. church, the rest being secured through the Workers in a house to house canvass. Everybody's Mission school also sent $3.25 some time ago. Contributions may be left at F. W. Poland's, or Kelsey Bennett's, corner of Broadway and Washington.

ALL WILL TAKE PART.

A New Arrangement For Commencement Exercises.

The board of education in the past week have held secret sessions, but not until today did the object of the meetings become known. It seems that the arrangements to have only eleven of the graduates take part in the commencement exercises did not altogether suit them, and it was decided that all should take some part, and Professor Sanor yesterday notified the class of the decision.

A UNION BROKE

And the New Building In the Midway Took Fire.

By the breaking of a gas union in the Midway yesterday afternoon, fire was communicated to the new building under course of erection in the rear of the syndicate block. The flames were under the floor, and when the department arrived much difficulty was experienced in reaching the blaze. At length the Babcocks put out the fire.

MAY SNOW.

Ohio Crops Are Thought to Be Injured by Cold Snap.

Cincinnati, May 3.—Considerable snow fell here and throughout southern Ohio. At several points the boys were reported as enjoying the unusual sport of playing snowball in May.

The temperature is so low that much damage has been done throughout the Ohio valley. Preceding the snow there was a constant fall of rain for 24 hours. The Ohio river and all its tributaries are rising rapidly.

Bogus Count Exposed.

Columbus, O., May 3.—William Mickel of Darmstadt, Hesse, Germany, was ordered to leave Ohio by Prosecuting Attorney Dyer under pain of prosecution. Several years ago Miss Marie Pietsche, a wealthy young heiress, went to Darmstadt to visit an aged grandmother. While there she made the acquaintance of Mickel, who represented himself to be the heir of a German count, and in line for a vast estate and a noble title. He made violent love to the young German-American girl, and she loved in return. He learned that she had $10,000 to the credit of herself and brother in a German bank, and that only added to his love. Miss Pietsche introduced the "Count" to her friends here, from whom he borrowed various amounts. A letter to the authorities from his wife exposed him.

For Sunday Ball.

Cleveland, May 3.—President Robison of the Cleveland baseball club stated that he intended to let his team play Sunday games, notwithstanding the declaration of the mayor that the state law would be enforced. Mr. Robison proposes to let his players be arrested, and in that way test the validity of the law and the city ordinance against Sunday ball.

Death of a Pioneer.

Cleveland, May 3.—Miller M. Spangler, one of the pioneers of Cleveland, died at the age of 84. He was one of the first chiefs of the volunteer fire department, and was for two terms sheriff of the county. He was the head of the house of M. M. ## Big Blaze at Bradner.

Bradner, O., May 3.—This place was visited by a disastrous fire which almost wiped out the business portion of the town, causing a loss estimated at $50,000, and causing the death of Mrs. Simon Welch, 45, of heart disease. The fire started from a gas jet in J. C. Sheet's livery stable.

Winter Returns.

Cleveland, May 3.—Dispatches from towns in the interior of the state say that the rain turned into snow, and in many places wintry conditions prevailed. At Bucyrus three inches of snow fell, and at Martin's Ferry, in the southeastern part of the state, the ground was covered with it.

It originated in Kennedy's hotel and that structure was entirely consumed, together with a large dwelling house and bottling works, all the property of P. S. Kennedy. The fire was the work of an incendiary. The damage is over $10,000, with light insurance.

MACK WAS NO MATCH

For Black Frank, the Negro Pugilist.

FOUGHT FIERCELY TO A FINISH

The Fight Took Place In the Old Dancing Pavilion at Rock Spring, and Ended In the Seventh Round When the Unknown Went Down In a Heap.

Imagine a rickety, old, covered platform in a wooded glade. It is lighted by the glare of an old torch and a lantern or two, and filled with a howling, yelling crowd of men and boys. A square is roped off near the center, and in sit two men, stripped to the waist, are battling for supremacy and a small purse. Suddenly the shorter and less agile of the pair springs forward and strikes straight from the shoulder, his antagonist staggers, throws up one arm, as if to defend his face, retreats a step or two, and makes one last desperate stand, but to no purpose. A powerful blow lands on his jaw, and he goes down in a heap on the floor. For a moment the crowd is still, and naught is heard but the steady voice of the referee as he quickly counts the seconds. Then there is a burst of storm and cries. Dozens surge into the ring. The stricken man is half-dragged, half-carried to his corner, while the victor, surrounded by his cheering friends, is borne back by the rush of men, anxious to shake his hand. Imagine these things, and you have the last of the fight between Black Frank and Mack Haley at Rock Spring when today was yet young.

Haley, who was backed by G. E. Allison, of Elwood City, came here a day or two ago, and a match was arranged with Black Frank, the instructor of the East Liverpool Athletic club. He is tall, well built but wiry, and has had sufficient experience in the ring to give him unbounded confidence. The colored pugilist has also been in many a battle, and was prepared for anything. The word was passed around among the sports yesterday afternoon, and at midnight a crowd boarded the ferryboat. They were taken across the river, where there was another crowd, and after tickets were counted and checked, the boat started up stream. There was much wrangling and discussion as to where the fight should take place, but the old dancing pavilion at Rock Spring was finally decided upon, and the crowd disembarked. A walk up the road through mud and sand soon placed the crowd at the desired point, and preliminaries were quickly passed through. There were not enough lights, but the crowd didn't care, those who could climbing into the rafters about the arena, while others ranged themselves outside the ropes. Jack Hassey was chosen referee and Jack Robinson stakeholder and timekeeper. The men took their respective corners, the crowd yelled a little in anticipation of what was soon to happen, and Hassey gave the word.

The men lightly sprang to the center and as they moved slowly around, each watching every movement of the other, it was easily seen that the white man was taller, but the other was strong and well built and determined.

Round 1.—Both sparred cautiously for an opening. Frank led for head. Mac parried and landed on chest. Quick exchange of blows and in fighting, Frank repeatedly landing on his antagonists chest, and Mack hitting on the jaw. Round closed with honors even.

Round 2.—Frank landed on chest, returned on jaw. They clinch and Mack has the best of it. Frank lunges savagely, and strikes the other's face, and in return receives a heavy blow on the jaw. Mack lands again and receives a heavy blow on the chest. Again are the honors even.

Round 3.—The men came together with a rush. Frank led for jaw. The blow was parried, and he landed heavily on his opponent's chest. They clinched and fierce in fighting followed. Again they sparred for an opening, and again Frank received and gave one on the chest. They clinched and there was a cry that Frank had fouled, and the round ended with Mack at good advantage.

Round 4.—"Are you afraid to lead?" asked Frank when they came up for the next round. He received no answer, and the men rushed. Frank delivered a series of jabs on the chest, and Mack brought him to his knees by a blow on the jaw. He quickly arose, but was again knocked down. Again he regained his feet, and again went down, the wicked swing of the big fellow being too much for him. The round closed amid the wildest confusion.

Mack had his opponent on his knees more than half the round.

Round 5.—Four quick jabs from Frank on chest, and two on jaw from Mack started the round. An upper cut of Mack that would have ended the fight, was neatly dodged, Frank landing on jaw and Mack returning.

Round 6.—After sparring for a chance, Frank delivered three jabs on jaw. Mack lands on chest. A swing sent Mack to his knees, the blow striking him in the neck. Time was called as he staggered to his feet. Hard fighting.

Round 7.—The men rushed at each other like a pair of maddened bulls. Frank struck Mack a telling blow on the jaw. They clinched, were separated, sparred and clinched again. Frank swung his right, and landing on jaw, staggered Mack. Following the advantage with a rush, he struck him on the jugular. It was a powerful blow, and without a word Mack went to the floor. He struggled to get up, but it was all over. The fight started at 2:37 o'clock.

The men showed few signs of punishment, and no blood was drawn. Mack's friends believe he can whip the colored man and there may be another battle. Haley weighed 176 pounds, and Frank was somewhat heavier.

Manager McDonald was indignant when he heard this morning of the disgraceful scene at Rock Spring. He said that he regretted that the grounds had been used for that purpose, but it would not happen again. The grounds will soon be enclosed, and an efficient force of officers will see that no more fights take place there. It is also rumored that the authorities of Hancock county have a nice little list of those who were present, and the next grand jury may question a few of them.

DON'T KNOW THEM.

Liverpool Credited With People Who Can't Be Located.

A Cleveland morning paper contains the following special from Delaware:

"Mike Connell, Richard Keefe and Morris Bennett, East Liverpool toughs, held up M. W. Wheeler, a student, at the Big Four crossing, at midnight. Officer Karl had been shadowing the gang and caught them in the act. All are in the city lockup."

All attempts to locate the men in this city proved fruitless, and the names given are evidently fictitious.

CHARLEY M'KEE'S FALL

Resulted In a Very Painful Injury.

JIM DIXON CAME DOWN, TOO

One Was Being Held Aloft by Friends, and the Other Was Carrying the Hod Up a Ladder—A Pair of Accidents, With No Serious Results.

It will be some time before Charles McKee again attempts to do the act of a brother in gymnastic performances.

Last evening at the rooms of the Chevalier club he met with a painful accident that will lay him up for several days. John Finley and Harry Risinger were holding McKee in the air, when Risinger became tired and let go his hold, dropping him to the floor. He alighted on his left side with the result that his arm was broken and his wrist dislocated. He was at once taken to the office of a physician where the fracture was set, and today he is resting easy although his arm is giving him a great deal of pain.

Jim Dixon, employed as hod carrier on the Arbuckle building, was carrying bricks up a ladder when a rung broke, and he fell. It is believed that he dropped 24 feet, and, although shaken somewhat was not badly hurt. A cut on his head and a gash in his leg constituted his injuries. He consulted a physician, and walked home. Dixon will leave the city this afternoon for the home of his father in Tennessee.

MACK WAS NO MATCH

For Black Frank, the Negro Pugilist.

FOUGHT FIERCELY TO A FINISH

The Fight Took Place In the Old Dancing Pavilion at Rock Spring, and Ended In the Seventh Round When the Unknown Went Down In a Heap.

Imagine a rickety, old, covered platform in a wooded glade. It is lighted by the glare of an old torch and a lantern or two, and filled with a howling, yelling crowd of men and boys. A square is roped off near the center, and in it two men, stripped to the waist, are battling for supremacy and a small purse. Suddenly the shorter and less agile of the pair springs forward and strikes straight from the shoulder, his antagonist staggers, throws up one arm, as if to defend his face, retreats a step or two, and makes one last desperate stand, but to no purpose. A powerful blow lands on his jaw, and he goes down in a heap on the floor. For a moment the crowd is still, and naught is heard but the steady voice of the referee as he quickly counts the seconds. Then there is a burst of storm and cries. Dozens surge into the ring. The stricken man is half-dragged, half-carried to his corner, while the victor, surrounded by his cheering friends, is borne back by the rush of men, anxious to shake his hand. Imagine these things, and you have the last of the fight between Black Frank and Mack Haley at Rock Spring when today was yet young.

Haley, who was backed by G. E. Allison, of Elwood City, came here a day or two ago, and a match was arranged with Black Frank, the instructor of the East Liverpool Athletic club. He is tall, well built but wiry, and has had sufficient experience in the ring to give him unbounded confidence. The colored pugilist has also been in many a battle, and was prepared for anything. The word was passed around among the sports yesterday afternoon, and at midnight a crowd boarded the ferryboat. They were taken across the river, where there was another crowd, and after tickets were counted and checked, the boat started up stream. There was much wrangling and discussion as to where the fight should take place, but the old dancing pavilion at Rock Spring was finally decided upon, and the crowd disembarked. A walk up the road through mud and sand soon placed the crowd at the desired point, and preliminaries were quickly passed through. There were not enough lights, but the crowd didn't care, those who could climbing into the rafters about the arena, while others ranged themselves outside the ropes. Jack Hassey was chosen referee and Jack Robinson stakeholder and time-keeper. The men took their respective corners, the crowd yelled a little in anticipation of what was soon to happen, and Hassey gave the word.

The men lightly sprang to the center and as they moved slowly around, each watching every movement of the other, it was easily seen that the white man was taller, but the other was strong and well built and determined.

Round 1.—Both sparred cautiously for an opening. Frank led for head. Mac parried and landed on chest. Quick exchange of blows and in fighting, Frank repeatedly landing on his antagonists chest, and Mack hitting on the jaw. Round closed with honors even.

Round 2.—Frank landed on chest, returned on jaw. They clinch and Mack has the best of it. Frank lunges savagely, and strikes the other's face, and in return receives a heavy blow on the jaw. Mack lands again and receives a heavy blow on the chest. Again are the honors even.

Round 3.—The men came together with a rush. Frank led for jaw. The blow was parried, and he landed heavily on his opponent's chest. They clinched and fierce in fighting followed. Again they sparred for an opening, and again Frank received and gave one on the chest. They clinched and there was a cry that Frank had fouled, and the round ended with Mack at good advantage.

Round 4.—"Are you afraid to lead?" asked Frank when they came up for the next round. He received no answer, and the men rushed. Frank delivered a series of jabs on the chest, and Mack brought him to his knees by a blow on the jaw. He quickly arose, but was again knocked down. Again he regained his feet, and again went down, the wicked swing of the big fellow being too much for him. The round closed amid the wildest confusion.

Mack had his opponent on his knees more than half the round.

Round 5.—Four quick jabs from Frank on chest, and two on jaw from Mack started the round. An upper cut of Mack that would have ended the fight, was neatly dodged, Frank landing on jaw and Mack returning.

Round 6.—After sparring for a chance, Frank delivered three jabs on jaw. Mack lands on chest. A swing sent Mack to his knees, the blow striking him in the neck. Time was called as he staggered to his feet. Hard fighting.

Round 7.—The men rushed at each other like a pair of maddened bulls. Frank struck Mack a telling blow on the jaw. They clinched, were separated, sparred and clinched again. Frank swung his right, and landing on jaw, staggered Mack. Following the advantage with a rush, he struck him on the jugular. It was a powerful blow, and without a word Mack went to the floor. He struggled to get up, but it was all over. The fight started at 2:37 o'clock.

The men showed few signs of punishment, and no blood was drawn. Mack's friends believe he can whip the colored man and there may be another battle. Haley weighed 176 pounds, and Frank was somewhat heavier.

Manager McDonald was indignant when he heard this morning of the disgraceful scene at Rock Spring. He said that he regretted that the grounds had been used for that purpose, but it would not happen again. The grounds will soon be enclosed, and an efficient force of officers will see that no more fights take place there. It is also rumored that the authorities of Hancock county have a nice little list of those who were present, and the next grand jury may question a few of them.

DON'T KNOW THEM.

Liverpool Credited With People Who Can't Be Located.

A Cleveland morning paper contains the following special from Delaware:

"Mike Connell, Richard Keefe and Morris Bennett, East Liverpool toughs, held up M. W. Wheeler, a student, at the Big Four crossing, at midnight. Officer Karl had been shadowing the gang and caught them in the act. 'All are in the city lockup.'"

All attempts to locate the men in this city proved fruitless, and the names given are evidently fictitious.

CHARLEY M'KEE'S FALL

Resulted In a Very Painful Injury.

JIM DIXON CAME DOWN, TOO

One Was Being Held Aloft by Friends, and the Other Was Carrying the Hod Up a Ladder—A Pair of Accidents, With No Serious Results.

It will be some time before Charles McKee again attempts to do the act of a brother in gymnastic performances.

Last evening at the rooms of the Chevalier club he met with a painful accident that will lay him up for several days. John Finley and Harry Risinger were holding McKee in the air, when Risinger became tired and let go his hold, dropping him to the floor. He alighted on his left side with the result that his arm was broken and his wrist dislocated. He was at once taken to the office of a physician where the fracture was set, and today he is resting easy although his arm is giving him a great deal of pain.

Jim Dixon, employed as hod carrier on the Arbuckle building, was carrying bricks up a ladder when a rung broke, and he fell. It is believed that he dropped 24 feet, and, although shaken somewhat was not badly hurt. A cut on his head and a gash in his leg constituted his injuries. He consulted a physician, and walked home. Dixon will leave the city this afternoon for the home of his father in Tennessee.

THE RAINBOW IN THE SPRAY.

The tide is foul that sweeps about the town—
A yellow, turbid, disenchanted flood
Of city refuse mixed, and oil and mud.
But when a ferryboat, big, ugly, brown,
Against the gale of March comes lumbering
down,
The waves she flings to either side are bright
With spray as dazzling in the sun's keen
light,
As white, as fair, as pure as snow at dawn.
And in the spindrift from each chopping crest
The colors of the rainbow meet and play.
So in each life, however dull and gray,
There comes some breeze of fortune at its best,
Cheering the heart with love or hope or rest
And shining like the rainbow in the spray.
—J. L. Heaton in "The Quilting Bee."

Future of the Fur Seal.

Mr. David Starr Jordan, president of the Bering sea commission for 1896, and Mr. George A. Robinson, secretary to the commission, say in the April Forum:

The regulations adopted by the Paris tribunal of arbitration in 1893 for "the protection and preservation of the fur seal" have signally failed of their object. This failure is chiefly due to the treatment of the creature as an object of international litigation, not as an animal having habits and prejudices to which international statutes must conform if they are to serve any purpose. In the compromise adopted by the tribunal were embodied certain propositions, apparently fair from the legal side of the case, but wholly repugnant to the animal. The only possible basis for a final arrangement for the protection and preservation of the fur seal must conform perfectly to its habits. That such a settlement must finally be made admits of no doubt. It is not to be supposed for a moment that England, Russia and the United States will fail to settle so simple a problem, or that these great nations are so weak or so barbarous as to allow this wonderful animal to be wasted without mercy, when the conditions of its preservation are fully understood.

To balance land killing against sea killing, to kill with guns in one sea and with spears in another, to kill on land in July and at sea in April and August, to have a closed zone of 60 miles and an open zone of 200—all these compromises are ingenious on paper, and find their precedent in the checks and balances of constitutional law, but not in the facts of natural history. How such regulations affect the animal is not to be settled by compromise. It is a question of fact, and any system of regulations must be judged from the standpoint of the animal itself. The whole Bering sea dispute belongs primarily to natural history, not to international law. If existing forms of international law fail to protect a noble and valuable animal in its migrations or its feeding excursions at sea, then more international law must be written, and the actual habits of the animal must determine the nature of such law.

A Century of Dismemberment.

The idle talk about the integrity of the Turkish empire deceives nobody today. The dismemberment of Turkey began over 100 years ago. In 1783 Turkey lost the Crimea. In 1830 she lost Greece. In 1857 Moldavia and Wallachia, the two Danubian principalities, were united, and finally became the present flourishing kingdom of Roumania under King Charles in 1881. In 1862 the Turkish garrison evacuated Belgrade, and in 1878 Serbia became an independent kingdom. Bulgaria is virtually independent under Prince Ferdinand, and Turkey quietly acquiesced in the absorption of eastern Roumelia in 1887. Kars and Batum were snatched by Russia in 1878. England seized Cyprus in the same year, and Austria was comfortably installed in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Where is the alleged integrity of the Turkish empire in the face of the above historical facts? Bosnia and Herzegovina, two essentially Mussulman provinces, have nothing in common with Austria, which now rules over them.

But when the question of Crete and Greece comes to be considered, all Christian Europe shakes with holy horror at the unreasonable aspirations of Greece in seeking to free an island inhabited by a homogeneous population, professing the same faith and situated at its very doors. But in this advanced era of civilization a new force, that makes for justice, is always felt on occasions like this among civilized nations, and that is public opinion. While Lord Salisbury was declaring in the house of Lords that Crete cannot be united to Greece, 100 English Liberals were signing a telegram of sympathy to King George, and a monster meeting of 30,000 Englishmen in Hyde park were passing resolutions in favor of Greece.—Demetrius N. Botassi, Grecian Consul General at New York, in North American Review.

A Wail From a King.

Even a king—if he doesn't happen to be born in Germany or Spain—can learn something from experience, and can finally appreciate that the motion of the world carries royalty as well as other things along with it. This possibility is illustrated in a way at once amusing and pathetic by a letter which the consul general of the Niger Coast protectorate recently received from Nana, once a king of some eminence as African kings go, but for several years past a sorrowing exile at Accra, with nothing to do except to meditate upon the disastrous results of what, for a few days, he thought was a war with Great Britain. "I used to think my country big," he writes, "and no man fit or able to touch me. But I have now been away from my country nearly three years and have seen the world, and I know I have been very foolish." He asks the consul to remember that wisdom was not to be expected of a man who had never left his native village, and says that the first real instruction he ever received was when the English man-of-war bombarded him. "I learn big lesson now," the letter proceeds, "for I lose all my cargoes, all my cash, all my houses, and my town is now only sand and bush. All my people are far away and many of my family killed by the ship. I think your queen she punish me plenty. I beg you, consul, to ask queen to let me sit down for my river before I die. I swear I never do wrong again, but will make small place for trade in one river close for Sapele. I hear queen have big play for this year because she live long past other king or queen. I beg you ask her to have mercy on me and pity my case." All this is decidedly unkingly, but Nana confronts a condition, not a theory, as formerly, and shows good sense, if not heroism, by expressing a desire to turn his royal mind to trade.—New York Times.

AN AMAZING FESTIVITY.

President McKinley's Inauguration as Imagined by a French Journalist.

The Figaro of Paris two days after President McKinley's inauguration presented to its readers a vivacious account of the ceremonies of the day, drawn from a Parisian imagination, which conveys some striking and entertaining facts that have undoubtedly escaped the closest attention of Americans, even those who were present. Nothing is more curious than this ceremony, observes the French journal, to which an altogether individual character is lent by the temperament of the American people. The hero of the day, Mr. McKinley, has been for a week installed with his family modestly in a little villa far from the noise and the crowd. Surrounded by his family, he has staid till midnight of March 3 in his office, and his secretaries, who have been warding off office seekers in the next room, declare that they heard champagne corks popping above the joyous bursts of laughter that kept up all the evening!

On Tuesday, when noon struck, the president elect, without uniform or pomp of any kind, clad in an overcoat and a high hat, went on foot to the capitol to take the oath and to come into contact with the people. There is nothing more primitive or more grandiose than this procession, which characterizes the American democracy in such an impressive way. The only official element in it is a detachment of soldiers and marines, who march at its head, but surrounding, preceding and following Mr. McKinley there is a vast mass of humanity which stretches as far as the eye can reach. The "marshal," or chief of police, keeps it at a proper distance by a sign.

When he reaches the threshold of the palace, the president uncovers and walks in alone. Having taken the oath and delivered his speech, he returns to the White House, all the time afoot and continually hemmed in by thousands of people singing "Yankee Doodle" or "Star Spangled Banner." Mr. Cleveland welcomes him and hands him the keys of the house. Then come the diplomatic reception and the first cabinet meeting.

But the fatigues of the day are not over for the new president. He has to be present at a public banquet of 10,000 covers at $1.25 a head, served in tents in the public garden, and to open the ball, which is the last of the festivities. At the dinner Mrs. McKinley does the honors, dazzling in the charm of her youth, wearing a gown of white satin spangled with silver and adorned with venetian lace and precious stones. The menu offers a variety of extraordinary dishes—fried oysters, chicken outlets, veal in rice, chicken, lobster and crab salads, pates de foie gras and Roman punch. If wine is passed, it is certainly not with the approval of the temperance societies, who have organized a demonstration the day before against the generous wines of France.

The ball that marks the close of the festivities is of an unheard of magnificence, and it certainly is no common sight to see 10,000 people dancing at the same time in a tent in the public garden.

For the future the new president does not belong to himself, but is the prey of journalists and reporters. Already they have published the list of things contained in his baggage and that of Mrs. McKinley. Clothes, linen, jewelry, silverware, toilet articles—everything has been counted, labeled and delivered over to the curiosity of the public. One transatlantic journal has even published a picture of the sheep whose wool furnished the cloth from which the presidential overcoat was made.

Dr. Hale's Twin Brother.

Dr. Henry M. Field of The Evangelist and Dr. Edward Everett Hale are the same age to a day. Both were born on April 3, 1822. It pleases them that their years are equal, and the fact that they have but one birthday between them has formed one of many ties that have helped to maintain a long continued intimacy. Dr. Field sends The Weekly the last birthday letter he received from Dr. Hale. It is dated at Washington and begins, "My dear young friend." In the course of it Dr. Hale says:

"Frankly I ought to say that I am hardly conscious that I am an old man. I sometimes think it would be better if I looked in the glass more often. I am, when I think of it, quite aware that I do not see myself as others see me. 'I think I enjoy life more than I did 50 years ago. I am sure that some things which I cannot manage fret me less than they did then. And I am quite sure that I see better how man, the child, can be a fellow worker with God, the Father, than I did then. Such a coworker has, of course, infinite power—so far forth—and he who has that is apt to be cheerful. I try to learn to let younger men and the women of their age do the hard work of the world. I try to confine myself to giving them advice and encouragement, but do not always succeed.'"

Judging from Dr. Hale's mood and philosophy, it is a remunerative experience to be 75 years old, provided the preliminary steps are well taken. The letter winds up with Dr. Hale's expression of regard for his "dear twin brother." "So he calls me his twin brother," says Dr. Field. "I am very proud of my twin brother, and he, to judge from his letter, seems well satisfied with his."

Long life to these brethren and many cheerful returns of their joint birthday!—Harper's Weekly.

Depew's Physicians.

Chauncey M. Depew is to take his vacation earlier than usual this year. He will sail for Europe the second week in May, to be gone seven weeks.

"My doctor tells me that I need a rest," Dr. Depew said yesterday. "I have been doing my full share of work lately, and am still doing it, in fact. But he thinks that a rest will do me lots of good. Mr. Webb has been ill for six months. He came back to work Monday, apparently restored to health. Mr. C. C. Clarke, the first vice president of the Central, is now on his way back from California, and will be at his desk on Monday. Their absence has kept me busy, but with them back and things running easily, it won't be difficult for me to get away."

"Who is your physician?" Dr. Depew was asked.

"Don't ask me, I'd rather not say," he said, with a deprecating wave of his hand. "I have several, and I call upon them according to what seems to be the matter with me. To mention any particular one might create jealousy, and I don't care to do that."

Dr. Depew's large staff of medical attendants is something of a standing joke among prominent New York doctors. One of them said yesterday that probably one-third of the best known physicians in the city had been called in at various times by Dr. Depew, according to his own diagnosis of the complaint he wanted to be treated for.—New York Herald.

A Coyote Hunt In Sections.

Big Alf Redwood, as he is called, is a ranchman living in Metcalf valley, Colo. He asked some friends in the east recently to get him a good pack of English foxhounds. Coyotes, he said, were eating him out of lambs and chickens, and he wanted to drive the beasts out of the country. Guns, native dogs, poisons and traps had all failed to accomplish the purpose. In due time 15 foxhounds arrived at the ranch, and a week later, when they were thoroughly rested, Redwood started out to try them. He tells his experiences to a New York friend in a letter as follows:

"We jumped one and away went the dogs lickety scoot and yelping to make the cactuses dance. They yelped all day, and next morning I found them lying down on the trail of the coyote, less than half a mile from the ranchhouse. Their feet were sore, and I carted them in on a buckboard. It was a month before they got in shape again. Then I took three of the dogs and started the same coyote. The three dogs circled with him around the ranch, going about five hours. Then I went out with four dogs and called off the three, and set the four after the beast. Away they went, and about dark I started four others. They ran till morning, and then I started the last four. The coyote saw the fresh dogs coming, for he had stopped, but he didn't stop long. The four dogs were the biggest and ugliest in the lot—Reg, Mart, Set and Kineo. They sailed after the coyote, and it took a straightaway course, not circling any more. The dogs overtook the beast 14 miles away, on Henry's ranch, and killed it. I haven't seen a coyote here since."—New York Sun.

A Doctor's Epitaph.

The family history of a doctor who died at the beginning of the last century may be found thus inscribed on his tombstone in Rudgwick church, Sussex, England:

Without this Wall
Lyeth the Body of Grandly Dr. Edward Haines
For to maintain his family spared not for paines
To ride and to run, to give relieve
To those which were in pain and grief.
Who the 30th of April entered Death's strait Gate,
From the Birth of our Saviour 1708:

And about the Age of 33.
And had his father's Virtue in ev'ry degree.
And left behind him when he left this life
Two likely Sons and a Loving Wife.

And about 36 weeks after
His wife and Reck was brought a bed with a Daughter
Which three we desire may live
Not to beg but to give.

His eldest Son Edward was then 6 years and 10 months old,
Amongst all the Doctors, tho' there are many,
He is as much mised as any.

Like to most mortals to his practice he was a slave
He caught the small pox & died & is here in his grave.

There are barber chairs that are operated by hydraulic power. The chair is movable, like any other. Under the seat and supporting it is a vertical steel column, which is a piston working in a cylinder in the base of the chair. Adjoining this cylinder and also within the base of the chair is a small reservoir containing oil. By means of a pump operated with the foot oil is pumped from the reservoir into the cylinder under the piston, causing the chair to rise. The pump is so adjusted that a single pressure on the lever downward to its limit lets the column of oil flow back into the reservoir, and the chair is thus lowered.—New York Sun.

Ohio State Journal Co.,

COLUMBUS, OHIO,

Love has a long way to go to reach the heart of the modern up-to-date young man. When he looks for a wife, he expects a good deal. Probably he expects more than he deserves. He wants good looks, good sense, good nature, good health. They usually go together.

An observing man learns that a woman who is physically weak and nervous and incapable, is likely to be ill-natured too. The sweetest temper is ruined by continual sickness.

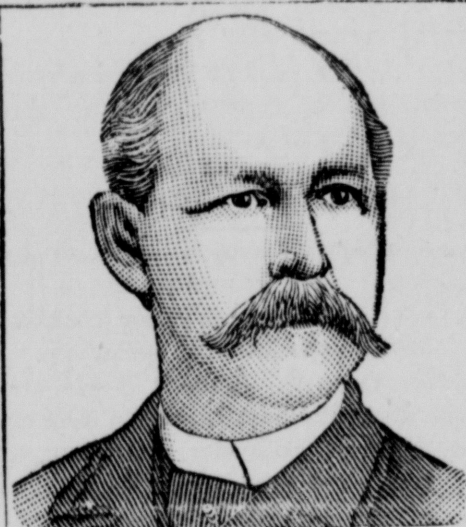

A woman whose nerves are constantly racked and dragged by debilitating drains and inflammation, cannot be a genial companion or happy wife; and she is totally unfitted to be a mother.

These troubles prevail almost universally among women largely because of carelessness and neglect. There is no real need of them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive specific for the weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organism.

It cures them radically and completely. It heals, strengthens and purifies. It is the only scientific remedy devised for this special purpose by an educated, skilled physician. It is the only medicine that makes motherhood easy and absolutely safe.

Miss Lauretta McNees, of Reno (P. O. Box 723), Washoe Co., Nev., writes: "I have discontinued taking the 'Prescription' and will not take any more (at present). Last month I had no pain at all and worked every day without any inconvenience whatever. It was the first time I never had pain during that period. I cannot say too much for your medicines, especially the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' I know of a lady who took one bottle of your 'Favorite Prescription' and she says she was not sick like she was with her first baby. This was her second baby. She thinks it a grand medicine. So do I."

Dr. Pierce has had a life-time of experience in this particular field. His 1000-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" contains several chapters devoted to woman's special physiology. A paper-bound copy will be sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. For a cloth-bound copy send 31 stamps.

THE RAINBOW IN THE SPRAY.

The tide is foul that sweeps about the town—
A yellow, turbid, disenchanted flood
Of city refuse mixed, and oil and mud.
But when a ferryboat, big, ugly, brown,
Against the gale of March comes lumbering
down,
The waves she flings to either side are bright
With spray as dazzling in the sun's keen
light,
As white, as fair, as pure as snow at dawn.
And in the spindrift from each chopping crest
The colors of the rainbow meet and play.
So in each life, however dull and gray,
There comes some breeze of fortune at its best,
Cheering the heart with love or hope or rest
And shining like the rainbow in the spray.
—J. L. Heaton in "The Quilting Bee."

Future of the Fur Seal.

Mr. David Starr Jordan, president of the Bering sea commission for 1896, and Mr. George Archibald Clark, secretary to the commission, say in the April Forum: The regulations adopted by the Paris tribunal of arbitration in 1893 for "the protection and preservation of the fur seal" have signally failed of their object. This failure is chiefly due to the treatment of the creature as an object of international litigation, not as an animal having habits and prejudices to which international statutes must conform if they are to serve any purpose. In the compromise adopted by the tribunal were embodied certain propositions, apparently, from the legal side of the case, but wholly repugnant to the animal. The only possible basis for a final arrangement for the protection and preservation of the fur seal must conform perfectly to its habits. That such a settlement must finally be made admits of no doubt. It is not to be supposed for a moment that England, Russia and the United States will fail to settle so simple a problem, or that these great nations are so weak or so barbarous as to allow this wonderful animal to be wasted without mercy, when the conditions of its preservation are fully understood.

To balance land killing against sea killing, to kill with guns in one sea and with spears in another, to kill on land in July and at sea in April and August, to have a closed zone of 60 miles and an open zone of 200—all these compromises are ingenious on paper, and find their precedent in the checks and balances of constitutional law, but not in the facts of natural history. How such regulations affect the animal is not to be settled by compromise. It is a question of fact, and any system of regulations must be judged from the standpoint of the animal itself. The whole Bering sea dispute belongs primarily to natural history, not to international law. If existing forms of international law fail to protect a noble and valuable animal in its migrations or its feeding excursions at sea, then more international law must be written, and the actual habits of the animal must determine the nature of such law.

A Century of Dismemberment.

The idle talk about the integrity of the Turkish empire deceives nobody today. The dismemberment of Turkey began over 100 years ago. In 1783 Turkey lost the Crimea. In 1830 she lost Greece. In 1857 Moldavia and Wallachia, the two Danubian principalities, were united, and finally became the present flourishing kingdom of Roumania under King Charles in 1881. In 1862 the Turkish garrison evacuated Belgrade, and in 1878 Serbia became an independent kingdom. Bulgaria is virtually independent under Prince Ferdinand, and Turkey quietly acquiesced in the absorption of eastern Roumelia in 1887. Kars and Batum were snatched by Russia in 1878. England seized Cyprus in the same year, and Austria was comfortably installed in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Where is the alleged integrity of the Turkish empire in the face of the above historical facts? Bosnia and Herzegovina, two essentially Mussulman provinces, have nothing in common with Austria, which now rules over them.

But when the question of Crete and Greece comes to be considered, all Christian Europe shakes with holy horror at the unreasonable aspirations of Greece in seeking to free an island inhabited by a homogeneous population, professing the same faith and situated at its very doors. But in this advanced era of civilization a new force, that makes for justice, is always felt on occasions like this among civilized nations, and that is public opinion. While Lord Salisbury was declaring in the house of Lords that Crete cannot be united to Greece, 100 English Liberals were signing a telegram of sympathy to King George, and a monster meeting of 30,000 Englishmen in Hyde park were passing resolutions in favor of Greece.—Demetrius N. Botassi, Grecian Consul General at New York, in North American Review.

A Wait From a King.

Even a king—if he doesn't happen to be born in Germany or Spain—can learn something from experience, and can finally appreciate that the motion of the world carries royalty as well as other things along with it. This possibility is illustrated in a way at once amusing and pathetic by a letter which the consul general of the Niger Coast protectorate recently received from Nana, once a king of some eminence as African kings go, but for several years past a sorrowing exile at Accra, with nothing to do except to meditate upon the disastrous results of what, for a few days, he thought was a war with Great Britain. "I used to think my country big," he writes, "and no man fit or able to touch me. But I have now been away from my country nearly three years and have seen the world, and I know I have been very foolish." He asks the consul to remember that wisdom was not to be expected of a man who had never left his native village, and says that the first real instruction he ever received was when the English man-of-war bombarded him. "I learn big lesson now," the letter proceeds, "for I lose all my cargoes, all my cash, all my houses, and my town is now only sand and bush. All my people are far away and many of my family killed by the ship. I think your queen she punish me plenty. I beg you, consul, to ask queen to let me sit down for my river before I die. I swear I never do wrong again, but will make small place for trade in one river close for Sapele. I hear queen have big play for this year because she live long past other king or queen. I beg you ask her to have mercy on me and pity my case." All this is decidedly unkingly, but Nana confronts a condition, not a theory, as formerly, and shows good sense, if not heroism, by expressing a desire to turn his royal mind to trade.—New York Times.

AN AMAZING FESTIVITY.

President McKinley's Inauguration as Imagined by a French Journalist.

The Figaro of Paris two days after President McKinley's inauguration presented to its readers a vivacious account of the ceremonies of the day, drawn from a Parisian imagination, which conveys some striking and entertaining facts that have undoubtedly escaped the closest attention of Americans, even those who were present. Nothing is more curious than this ceremony, observes the French journal, to which an altogether individual character is lent by the temperament of the American people. The hero of the day, Mr. McKinley, has been for a week installed with his family modestly in a little villa far from the noise and the crowd. Surrounded by his family, he has staid till midnight of March 3 in his office, and his secretaries, who have been warding off office seekers in the next room, declare that they heard champagne corks popping above the joyous bursts of laughter that kept up all the evening!

On Tuesday, when noon struck, the president elect, without uniform or pomp of any kind, clad in an overcoat and a high hat, went on foot to the capitol to take the oath and to come into contact with the people. There is nothing more primitive or more grandiose than this procession, which characterizes the American democracy in such an impressive way. The only official element in it is a detachment of soldiers and marines, who march at its head, but surrounding, preceding and following Mr. McKinley there is a vast mass of humanity which stretches as far as the eye can reach. The "marshal," or chief of police, keeps it at a proper distance by a sign.

When he reaches the threshold of the palace, the president uncovers and walks in alone. Having taken the oath and delivered his speech and reviewed the garrison of Washington, he returns to the White House, all the time afoot and continually hemmed in by thousands of people singing "Yankee Doodle" or "Star Spangled Banner." Mr. Cleveland welcomes him and hands him the keys of the house. Then come the diplomatic reception and the first cabinet meeting.

But the fatigues of the day are not over for the new president. He has to be present at a public banquet of 10,000 covers at $1.25 a head, served in tents in the public garden, and to open the ball, which is the last of the festivities. At the dinner Mrs. McKinley does the honors, dazzling in the charm of her youth, wearing a gown of white satin spangled with silver and adorned with venetian lace and precious stones. The menu offers a variety of extraordinary dishes—fried oysters, chicken outlets, veal in rice, chicken, lobster and crab salads, pates de foie gras and Roman punch. If wine is passed, it is certainly not with the approval of the temperance societies, who have organized a demonstration the day before against the generous wines of France.

The ball that marks the close of the festivities is of an unheard of magnificence, and it certainly is no common sight to see 10,000 people dancing at the same time in a tent in the public garden.

For the future the new president does not belong to himself, but is the prey of journalists and reporters. Already they have published the list of things contained in his baggage and that of Mrs. McKinley. Clothes, linen, jewelry, silverware, toilet articles—everything has been counted, labeled and delivered over to the curiosity of the public. One transatlantic journal has even published a picture of the sheep whose wool furnished the cloth from which the presidential overcoat was made.

Dr. Hale's Twin Brother.

Dr. Henry M. Field of the Evangelist and Dr. Edward Everett Hale are the same age to a day. Both were born on April 3, 1822. It pleases them that their years are equal, and the fact that they have but one birthday between them has formed one of many ties that have helped to maintain a long continued intimacy. Dr. Field sends The Weekly the last birthday letter he received from Dr. Hale. It is dated at Washington and begins, "My dear young friend." In the course of it Dr. Hale says: "Frankly I ought to say that I am hardly conscious that I am an old man. I sometimes think it would be better if I looked in the glass more often. I am, when I think of it, quite aware that I do not see myself as others see me.

"I think I enjoy life more than I did 50 years ago. I am sure that some things which I cannot manage fret me less than they did then. And I am quite sure that I see better how man, the child, can be a fellow worker with God, the Father, than I did then. Such a coworker has, of course, infinite power—so far forth—and he who has that is apt to be cheerful. I try to learn to let younger men and the women of their age do the hard work of the world. I try to confine myself to giving them advice and encouragement, but do not always succeed."

Judging from Dr. Hale's mood and philosophy, it is a remunerative experience to be 75 years old, provided the preliminary steps are well taken. The letter winds up with Dr. Hale's expression of regard for his "dear twin brother." "So he calls me his twin brother," says Dr. Field. "I am very proud of my twin brother, and he, to judge from his letter, seems well satisfied with his."

Long life to these brethren and many cheerful returns of their joint birthday!—Harper's Weekly.

Depew's Physicians.

Chauncey M. Depew is to take his vacation earlier than usual this year. He will sail for Europe the second week in May, to be gone seven weeks.

"My doctor tells me that I need a rest," Dr. Depew said yesterday. "I have been doing my full share of work lately, and am still doing it, in fact. But he thinks that a rest will do me lots of good. Mr. Webb has been ill for six months. He came back to work Monday, apparently restored to health. Mr. C. C. Clarke, the first vice president of the Central, is now on his way back from California, and will be at his desk on Monday. Their absence has kept me busy, but with them back and things running easily, it won't be difficult for me to get away."

"Who is your physician?" Dr. Depew was asked.

"Don't ask me. I'd rather not say," he said, with a deprecating wave of his hand. "I have several, and I call upon them according to what seems to be the matter with me. To mention any particular one might create jealousy, and I don't care to do that."

Dr. Depew's large staff of medical attendants is something of a standing joke among prominent New York doctors. One of them said yesterday that probably one-third of the best known physicians in the city had been called in at various times by Dr. Depew, according to his own diagnosis of the complaint he wanted to be treated for.—New York Herald.

A Coyote Hunt in Sections.

Big Alf Redwood, as he is called, is a ranchman living in Metcalf valley, Colo. He asked some friends in the east recently to get him a good pack of English foxhounds. Coyotes, he said, were eating him out of lambs and chickens, and he wanted to drive the beasts out of the country. Guns, native dogs, poisons and traps had all failed to accomplish the purpose. In due time 15 foxhounds arrived at the ranch, and a week later, when they were thoroughly rested, Redwood started out to try them. He tells his experiences to a New York friend in a letter as follows:

"We jumped one and away went the dogs lickety scoot and yelping to make the coyotes dance. They yelped all day, and next morning I found them lying down on the trail of the coyote, less than half a mile from the ranchhouse. Their feet were sore, and I carted them in on a buckboard. ## HE TURNED ON THE GAS.

Another Incident of the Youth of George Washington.

Mrs. Pickett, the widow of General Pickett, hero of the desperate rebel charge at Gettysburg, relates an anecdote of an old mammy whom she discovered at Fredericksburg and who veritably believes that she was Washington's first nurse. Here is her story:

"She was an old woman in a linsey woolsey petticoat and a bright turban, and we found her in one of our jaunts around the city and took a kodak picture of her. One of the company asked her in fun if she remembered Washington—you see, she was very old."

"'Deed an deedy I do, miss,' she answered glibly.

"'Perhaps you were one of his nurses, mammy.'

"'Dat am jess so, missy—I nursed him when he was a leetle miteer baby.'

"'Oh, then, you must have known about the cherry tree?'

"'But she did not, and it was explained to her and she listened with much interest.

"'Ize don know nothin 'bout no cherry tree, missy, but I 'members 'zactly when his maw found him in her room an de gas a-burnin 'cause he done turn it on.'

"'Did he tell her he turned it on, mammy?'

"'Deed an deedy he did, foh he nebber tole no lie.'

"'But, mammy, there wasn't any gas in those days.'

"'Yes, dere was, honey. I 'members dat too.'

We decided that old mammy had been the servant of some George Washington, but not our own immortal George, and we left her to enjoy her peculiar delusion undisturbed.—New York Mail and Express.

Why He Wouldn't Forget.

"Can I trust you to mail this?" asked Miss Hawkins of the new boarder, "or are you the kind of man who carries letters around in his pocket for a week before mailing them?"

"You may trust me," said the new boarder, taking the letter. "I was cured of that disease at my first attack. I was boarding in the same house with a very good friend, a married man. He lost his wife suddenly and was inconsolable. Loads of letters came to him from sympathetic friends, and one of them was handed to me to give to him by the postman. I carried it up stairs to my room and inadvertently put it into my desk with a lot of rubbish from my breast pocket, and then forgot all about it.

"Just a year after my friend had so far forgotten his loss that he became engaged to a very pretty girl. The morning of the wedding, to which I had been invited, I was putting my desk in order—a habit I have about once in six years—and I came across the letter for him. Forgetting the time at which it had come, I hurried down stairs with it, and, with many words of apology, handed it to him. He had a habit of reading out loud, and he began: 'My Dear Jack—You have received a blow in the loss of your wife from which you will never recover, but don't forget, my dear fellow, that—' Then he dropped it and glared at me.

"I didn't go to the wedding, and he's never spoken to me from that day to this. Yes, indeed, you may trust me to mail your letter without fail."—New York Journal.

Compressed Air as Motive Power.

The attention of inventors has been so concentrated on electricity and its possibilities that compressed air, which is almost as wonderful in its capabilities, has been quite lost sight of. Just what it is capable of we cannot as yet understand, but we do know that it runs locomotives, transfers the United States mails, hurls the charge of an explosive a mile and a half, with a force sufficient to pulverize a regiment. It operates block signals on railroads, loads guns, drives machinery, works pumps and carves out all sorts of beautiful things from stone and marble. It is coming into use for thousands of minor purposes.

As a cleaning and dusting agent it is invaluable. It copies letters, shears sheep and is utilized in the stockyards to slaughter and dress meat. As to its future, prediction is made that it will clean house, run dumb waiters, take the place of the horse as a means of locomotion, will wash dishes and rock the baby. There are inventors who declare that compressed air is already quite as useful as electricity, and much safer and more manageable. To bring it into its best uses large distributing stations must be built, from which compressed air will come as we now get gas and water. There will, no doubt, be a sharp rivalry between the two great powers, electricity and compressed air, and between the two we ought to be able to get most of our minor services well and cheaply performed.—New York Ledger.

A Crow That Ate Clams.

"I knew a man once," said a fisherman, "who had a pet crow that used to come down to meet him when he came in from fishing. The crow's owner was a fisherman. His boat might be among 40 or 50 other boats, all coming in together, but the crow never made any mistake. He always knew his own boat. He liked clams, and when he came aboard his owner would knock a couple of clams together—that would break one—and put the broken clam down for the crow to eat, and then he would go on rowing, and that's the way they always came ashore, the fisherman pulling on the oars and the crow sitting alongside of him eating clams."—New York Sun.

THE FISHERMAN'S PET CROW.

A Bird That Went to Church, Though Not to Service, Every Sunday.

"You will find pet crows alongshore," said a fisherman, "just as you might anywhere else. I knew a fisherman once that had one he got out of its nest when it was little, and brought up in his home. He never clipped its wings, and it used to go out and be gone, maybe for hours, perhaps for days, but it knew where it could get warm and where the best things to eat were, and it always came back. If any of the family saw it coming they would let it in; if they didn't see it the crow would sit on the railing by the door and caw to be let in; and, if nobody heard the cawing, it would peck at the door with its beak. It used to sleep in the house, and was on friendly terms with the whole household. The name of the crow's owner was William; his friends used to call him Bill. When mealtime came the crow would perch on the back of Bill's chair, and every now and then Bill would reach up over his shoulder something nice for the crow to eat.

"Every Sunday morning the crow used to go to church, and it never used to go any other time. It knew the sexton. The sexton was a fisherman, too, like everybody along the beach, and he was superintendent of the Sunday school, and a big man in the church generally. The crow used to go over to the church and sit on the doorstep Sunday morning and wait for the sexton to come, and when he did come and open the door, the crow would go in with him. The church was heated by a big stove, and while the sexton was building the fire the crow would sit on the back of a pew close by and look on. Sometimes, when the sexton was working away over the stove the crow would hitch along on the pew rail and caw to him; and sometimes the sexton would turn around and smile at the crow and maybe say something friendly, and then the crow would perk its head over on one side and caw and caw, and then the sexton would smile again and go on building the fire. He would put in a section of old tarred netting to start the fire with, something that every fisherman uses if he has got it, and the best thing in the world to start a fire with, and then he would build up the fire and light it, and when it had got well a-going and he had made everything snug he would leave the church until it was pretty near time for the service to begin; and when he went the crow would go with him. I think the crow would sometimes have stayed in the church, but of course that wouldn't do, and when the sexton was ready he would call the crow and the crow would follow him out, and they would separate where they had met, on the steps of the church. The sexton lived about half a mile away in one direction, and the crow lived close by in the other, and when the sexton had gone the crow would go over to its home and peck on the door, and they would let him in.

"Everybody around knew this crow, and nobody ever molested it. The crow itself took chances. Sometimes it flocked with other crows and then it was in danger of being shot; but nobody ever shot at it when it was alone. When they saw it fly by they said:

"There goes Bill's crow." — N. Y. Sun.

EXACTING DISCIPLINE.

The Cruel Severity of an Unmerciful Father.

Philip Gilbert Hamerton was, during his childhood, the victim of a severe and cruel discipline. His father was a man of ungovernable temper and irregular life, who had no sympathy with childish foibles, and whose only idea of educating a boy was to "make a man of him."

His method of teaching a lad to ride was to accompany him on a vicious black horse, and when little Philip erred in any of the observances of good riders, to punish him with his heavy hunting whip. The whip had a steel hammer at the end of a long handle; and if at any time the owner fancied that the child was turning out his toes, he would not say anything, but with cruel dexterity heal him a blow on the foot, sharp enough to make him writhe with pain.

Yet this Spartan severity had its valuable side. The elder Hamerton understood the importance of concentration, and if he saw the boy occupied with several books, would say:

"Take one of those books and read it steadily. Don't potter and play with half a dozen."

What he hated most was a lie or the shadow of a lie, and so bitter was this aversion that Philip was sometimes punished unjustly. He was expected to practice with dumb-bells 15 minutes every morning. This exercise was taken in the garden, but before beginning he always looked at the clock in the sitting-room. One day the father met him and asked:

"Have you done your 15 minutes?"

"Yes, papa."

"That is not true," said his aunt, from the next room. "He has only practiced for ten minutes; look at the clock."

The hand stood at ten minutes past 11; and though the boy protested that he had begun at ten minutes before the hour, the "additional lie" put his father in a fury, and he was ordered to practice continually for two hours. And though the child was ready to drop with fatigue long before the 120 minutes were over, not one of them was remitted.—Youth's Companion.

THE GOOD OLD INN.

Passing of a Word That Has Played Its Part in History.

It might be interesting to know who was the first person to keep an inn. The word is of Anglo-Saxon origin, and signifies a lodging house; another term was gese hus, a house for guests; or cumena hus, a house for comers. Near the highroads a few scattered inns were established for the convenience of travelers over night.

Edward the Confessor ordained that if a traveler remained over three nights in an inn he was to be styled third-night-awn-hinde, and the landlord was answerable for him exactly as though he was one of the servants. A good many alehouses were dotted around Saxon England, and the sturdy early Englishmen spent a great deal of time in them. Chaucer's friar "knew well the tavern in every town," and Dunstan found it necessary to ordain that a priest "should in nowise be alesop"—that is, a story teller or reciter at an alehouse. Efforts were continually made to keep down the number of inns. In the reign of Edward I. there were but three in the whole of London.

The inns of the middle ages were furnished in a very homely manner. In the fifteenth century the famous St. George inn at Salisbury possessed 13 guest rooms, each with three beds in it, a table on trestles and oaken benches. People ate and slept in the same apartment indiscriminately. At this time titled persons slept on a bed, while commoners had to put up with mattresses—a curious distinction.

In French and German medieval inns a humorous custom prevailed for the punishment of those convicted of talking and boasting too much. A wooden knife was always placed by the side of the president of the table, whose duty and privilege it was to put the boasters to silence by ringing the bell in the blade or blowing the whistle concealed in the handle. He then handed the knife to the man who had been "called down," who kept it until he in turn had a chance of presenting it to some one who proved a greater boaster than himself.

During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries the inns of Paris and London were the gathering places of the wits and literary men of the day; even the noblemen used the inns as a sort of club. The duke of Montague gave a dinner at the Devil, and tradition says the great Elizabeth herself did not disdain to eat pork and peas at the King's Head, in Fenchurch street. An ancient covered metal dish is still exhibited there as the one she used. Most of the famous old literary taverns are now merely a matter of history. The rooms were small and low, with only wooden benches, but the giants of the time used to gather there for the social intercourse they craved. Mine Host was a personal friend of his customers, and the same customers frequented the same inn year after year.—St. Louis Republic.

Just Shrewd Judgment.

She—I went to a fortune-teller to-day, just for a lark, and she told me a lot of things.

He—Yes, some of them hit it pretty closely, but I hope you don't think there is anything supernatural about their powers. They just use shrewd judgment; that is all.

"That may be true, dear. She told me I was married to a man who fell far short of what I deserve."—Indianapolis Journal.

A. W. SCOTT, Architect.

To my patrons, and those contemplating building, permit me to state: I have made plans and constructed the building for more than three times the number of any other one Architect in this country, during my nine years practice in this city, and in each case devoted careful study that I might not cause you to expend one dollar which it was not required, and yet give you a building free from cracked or settled walls, both interior and exterior, free from unsightly cast iron plates on the side of your building, or cumbersome "hog chains" extending down in your finish d rooms to support a roof, as some are in this city, constructed by those professing to know better. I guarantee you a saving in each building of many times what the plans cost you, and the most substantial of structures. We profit by other people's mistakes. We study. We are progressive. We put strength where it belongs. It was the unlearned and illiterate Egyptians who constructed their buildings with 9 to 14 foot thick walls, regardless of size of building, because their forefathers did the same. Science has taught practical architects that necessity demands practical economy. We are up to date on any style building you want. Make your blue print copies of your plans. Type written specifications. Duplicate or triplicate copies when desired. Make your neat sketches of all contemplated building, free of charge, as all first-class architects do. We charge you a reasonable compensation for our work, which we allow you to determine, while with some "half a loaf is better than none." Beware of the man who proposes to make your plans for nothing. Somebody is going to pay dear for them in the end. We are too busy to announce all the leading prints on this subject. We are completing the 23rd contract for plans since January, '97. Call and see me.

HE TURNED ON THE GAS.

Another Incident of the Youth of George Washington.

Mrs. Pickett, the widow of General Pickett, hero of the desperate rebel charge at Gettysburg, relates an anecdote of an old mammy whom she discovered at Fredericksburg and who veritably believes that she was Washington's first nurse. Here is her story:

"She was an old woman in a linsey woolsey petticoat and a bright turban, and we found her in one of our jaunts around the city and took a kodak picture of her. One of the company asked her in fun if she remembered Washington—you see, she was very old."

"'Deed an deedy I do, miss,' she answered glibly.

"'Perhaps you were one of his nurses, mammy.'

"'Dat am jess so, missy—I nursed him when he was a leetle mite er baby.'

"'Oh, then, you must have known about the cherry tree?'

"'But she did not, and it was explained to her and she listened with much interest.

"'Ize don know nothin 'bout no cherry tree, missy, but I 'members 'zactly when his maw found him in her room an de gas a-burnin 'cause he done turn it on.'

"'Did he tell her he turned it on, mammy?'

"'Deed an deedy he did, foh he nebber tole no lie.'

"'But, mammy, there wasn't any gas in those days.'

"'Yes, dere was, honey. I 'members dat too.'

We decided that old mammy had been the servant of some George Washington, but not our own immortal George, and we left her to enjoy her peculiar delusion undisturbed.—New York Mail and Express.

It used to sleep in the house, and was on friendly terms with the whole household. The name of the crow's owner was William; his friends used to call him Bill. When mealtime came the crow would perch on the back of Bill's chair, and every now and then Bill would reach up over his shoulder something nice for the crow to eat.

"Every Sunday morning the crow used to go to church, and it never used to go any other time. It knew the sexton. The sexton was a fisherman, too, like everybody along the beach, and he was superintendent of the Sunday school, and a big man in the church generally. The crow used to go over to the church and sit on the doorstep Sunday morning and wait for the sexton to come, and when he did come and open the door, the crow would go in with him. The church was heated by a big stove, and while the sexton was building the fire the crow would sit on the back of a pew close by and look on. Sometimes, when the sexton was working away over the stove the crow would hitch along on the pew rail and caw to him; and sometimes the sexton would turn around and smile at the crow and maybe say something friendly, and then the crow would perk its head over on one side and caw and caw, and then the sexton would smile again and go on building the fire. He would put in a section of old tarred netting to start the fire with, something that every fisherman uses if he has got it, and the best thing in the world to start a fire with, and then he would build up the fire and light it, and when it had got well a-going and he had made everything snug he would leave the church until it was pretty near time for the service to begin; and when he went the crow would go with him. I think the crow would sometimes have stayed in the church, but of course that wouldn't do, and when the sexton was ready he would call the crow and the crow would follow him out, and they would separate where they had met, on the steps of the church. The sexton lived about half a mile away in one direction, and the crow lived close by in the other, and when the sexton had gone the crow would go over to its home and peck on the door, and they would let him in.

"Everybody around knew this crow, and nobody ever molested it. The crow itself took chances. Sometimes it flocked with other crows and then it was in danger of being shot; but nobody ever shot at it when it was alone. When they saw it fly by they said: "There goes Bill's crow." — N. Y. Sun.

EXACTING DISCIPLINE.

The Cruel Severity of an Unmerciful Father.

Philip Gilbert Hamerton was, during his childhood, the victim of a severe and cruel discipline. His father was a man of ungovernable temper and irregular life, who had no sympathy with childish foibles, and whose only idea of educating a boy was to "make a man of him."

His method of teaching a lad to ride was to accompany him on a vicious black horse, and when little Philip erred in any of the observances of good riders, to punish him with his heavy hunting whip. The whip had a steel hammer at the end of a long handle; and if at any time the owner fancied that the child was turning out his toes, he would not say anything, but with cruel dexterity heal him a blow on the foot, sharp enough to make him writhe with pain.

Yet this Spartan severity had its valuable side. The elder Hamerton understood the importance of concentration, and if he saw the boy occupied with several books, would say:

"Take one of those books and read it steadily. Don't potter and play with half a dozen."

What he hated most was a lie or the shadow of a lie, and so bitter was this aversion that Philip was sometimes punished unjustly. He was expected to practice with dumb-bells 15 minutes every morning. This exercise was taken in the garden, but before beginning he always looked at the clock in the sitting-room. One day the father met him and asked:

"Have you done your 15 minutes?"

"Yes, papa."

"That is not true," said his aunt, from the next room. "He has only practiced for ten minutes; look at the clock."

The hand stood at ten minutes past 11; and though the boy protested that he had begun at ten minutes before the hour, the "additional lie" put his father in a fury, and he was ordered to practice continually for two hours. And though the child was ready to drop with fatigue long before the 120 minutes were over, not one of them was remitted.—Youth's Companion.

THE GOOD OLD INN.

Passing of a Word That Has Played Its Part in History.

It might be interesting to know who was the first person to keep an inn. The word is of Anglo-Saxon origin, and signifies a lodging house; another or other term was gest hus, a house for guests; or cumena hus, a house for comers. Near the highroads a few scattered inns were established for the convenience of travelers over night.

Edward the Confessor ordained that if a traveler remained over three nights in an inn he was to be styled third-night-awn-hinde, and the landlord was answerable for him exactly as though he was one of the servants. A good many alehouses were dotted around Saxon England, and the sturdy early Englishmen spent a great deal of time in them. Chaucer's friar "knew well the tavern in every town," and Dunstan found it necessary to ordain that a priest "should in nowise be alesop"—that is, a story teller or reciter at an alehouse. Efforts were continually made to keep down the number of inns. In the reign of Edward I. there were but three in the whole of London.

The inns of the middle ages were furnished in a very homely manner. In the fifteenth century the famous St. George inn at Salisbury possessed 13 guest rooms, each with three beds in it, a table on trestles and oaken benches. People ate and slept in the same apartment indiscriminately. At this time titled persons slept on a bed, while commoners had to put up with mattresses—a curious distinction.

In French and German medieval inns a humorous custom prevailed for the punishment of those convicted of talking and boasting too much. A wooden knife was always placed by the side of the president of the table, whose duty and privilege it was to put the boasters to silence by ringing the bell in the blade or blowing the whistle concealed in the handle. He then handed the knife to the man who had been "called down," who kept it until he in turn had a chance of presenting it to some one who proved a greater boaster than himself.

During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries the inns of Paris and London were the gathering places of the wits and literary men of the day; even the noblemen used the inns as a sort of club. The duke of Montague gave a dinner at the Devil, and tradition says the great Elizabeth herself did not disdain to eat pork and peas at the King's Head, in Fenchurch street. An ancient covered metal dish is still exhibited there as the one she used. Most of the famous old literary taverns are now merely a matter of history. The rooms were small and low, with only wooden benches, but the giants of the time used to gather there for the social intercourse they craved. Mine Host was a personal friend of his customers, and the same customers frequented the same inn year after year.—St. Louis Republic.

Just Shrewd Judgment.

She—I went to a fortune-teller to-day, just for a lark, and she told me a lot of things.

He—Yes, some of them hit it pretty closely, but I hope you don't think there is anything supernatural about their powers. They just use shrewd judgment; that is all.

"That may be true, dear. She told me I was married to a man who fell far short of what I deserve."—Indianapolis Journal.

THREE MILLIONS

Worth of Property Devoured by Fire at Pittsburg.

BIG CONCERNS LAID IN ASHES.

The Immense Wholesale Grocery House of Jenkins & Company and Several Large Buildings in the Vicinity Are Consumed by the Ravenous Flames. Falling Walls Bury Firemen.

Pittsburg, May 3. — The most destructive fire which has visited this city since 1849 broke out about midnight in T. C. Jenkins' wholesale grocery house.

The flames spread rapidly from Jenkins' and soon had consumed several large buildings in the vicinity. The total loss will be at least $2,000,000. The insurance can not be told yet, but it is supposed to be well covered.

The origin of the fire in the Jenkins building is not known, but it is supposed to have been smoldering for hours in a dust heap at the foot of the elevator shaft. The watchman tried to get the flames under control, but gave up the attempt and sent in an alarm. The department turned in a general alarm and soon all the engines in the city were on hand.

It was seen at once that the city department was not sufficient and the Allegheny City department was called on and responded quickly, sending almost their entire force.

At 1:30 a. m. some of the total losses were stated as follows: T. C. Jenkins, wholesale grocery, occupying an entire block, running through from Liberty to Penn avenue, between Fifth street and Cecil alley, loss fully $500,000.

Joseph Horne & Company's dry goods house, corner of Fifth and Penn, loss over $1,000,000, building and stock; Horne's office building, adjoining their store; buildings occupied by W. R. Grier & Company, china house, Penn avenue; Mayer's glove store, Shanahan's carpet house, Huck's cigar factory and Hall Brothers' building, in which the American Press association has its offices. The Methodist Book Concern building, in which are a number of offices, and Lee S. Smith's dental establishment, is partially destroyed.

The Duquesne theater adjoins the M. E. house and is now burning and will be a total loss. The "Surprise" clothing house on the opposite side of Penn avenue from the theater is also in flames and will probably be ruined.

A large number of buildings in the vicinity had windows broken and were deluged with water. At 2 a. m. the fire was under control.

At 3 a. m. the fire was finally mastered, but was still burning with intense fury within the limits of the blocks bounded by Fifth and Sixth streets east and west and Liberty and Penn avenues north and south. The loss, it is now believed, will be greatly in excess of the first estimates, and is placed at $3,000,000.

A number of firemen were injured by falling walls and live wires, but none of them were seriously hurt. Fireman George Acheson, who was one of the three men in Cecil alley when the Jenkins wall fell, is missing, and is supposed to be under the debris. The names of other firemen hurt are Mike Daly, Elmer Crocow, George Meekin, William Irwin and Robert Badger. All were taken to hospitals.

THREE MILLIONS

Worth of Property Devoured by Fire at Pittsburg.

BIG CONCERNS LAID IN ASHES.

The Immense Wholesale Grocery House of Jenkins & Company and Several Large Buildings in the Vicinity Are Consumed by the Ravenous Flames. Falling Walls Bury Firemen.

Pittsburg, May 3. — The most destructive fire which has visited this city since 1849 broke out about midnight in T. C. Jenkins' wholesale grocery house.

The flames spread rapidly from Jenkins' and soon had consumed several large buildings in the vicinity. The total loss will be at least $2,000,000. The insurance can not be told yet, but it is supposed to be well covered.

The origin of the fire in the Jenkins building is not known, but it is supposed to have been smouldering for hours in a dust heap at the foot of the elevator shaft. The watchman tried to get the flames under control, but gave up the attempt and sent in an alarm. The department turned in a general alarm and soon all the engines in the city were on hand.

It was seen at once that the city department was not sufficient and the Allegheny City department was called on and responded quickly, sending almost their entire force.

At 1:30 a. m. some of the total losses were stated as follows: T. C. Jenkins, wholesale grocery, occupying an entire block, running through from Liberty to Penn avenue, between Fifth street and Cecil alley, loss fully $500,000.

Joseph Horne & Company's dry goods house, corner of Fifth and Penn, loss over $1,000,000, building and stock; Horne's office building, adjoining their store; buildings occupied by W. R. Grier & Company, china house, Penn avenue; Mayer's glove store, Shanman's carpet house, Huck's cigar factory and Hall Brothers' building, in which the American Press association has its offices. The Methodist Book Concern building, in which are a number of offices, and Lee S. Smith's dental establishment, is partially destroyed.

The Duquesne theater adjoins the M. E. house and is now burning and will be a total loss. The "Surprise" clothing house on the opposite side of Penn avenue from the theater is also in flames and will probably be ruined.

A large number of buildings in the vicinity had windows broken and were deluged with water. At 2 a. m. the fire was under control.

At 3 a. m. the fire was finally mastered, but was still burning with intense fury within the limits of the blocks bounded by Fifth and Sixth streets east and west and Liberty and Penn avenues north and south. The loss, it is now believed, will be greatly in excess of the first estimates, and is placed at $3,000,000.

A number of firemen were injured by falling walls and live wires, but none of them were seriously hurt. Fireman George Acheson, who was one of the three men in Cecil alley when the Jenkins wall fell, is missing, and is supposed to be under the debris. The names of other firemen hurt are Mike Daly, Elmer Crocow, George Meekin, William Irwin and Robert Badger. All were taken to hospitals.
